A Hard, Rough Climb Ahead of Happy, Confident Youth

But the Hardcore and the Roughness Are REAL EDUCATION, and the View from the Top of the Rocky Hill Is Worth All the Climbing

Copyright, 1910, by American Journal-Examiner

Hundreds of thousands of young men have come out of the colleges and the schools, some in their teens and some in their twenties—and now they are looking ahead to the REAL WORK OF LIFE.

The path of study is a gentle, downhill stretch. It seems hard while the boys and the girls are at it, but it is nothing compared to the rough, uphill scramble of the hill of REAL SUCCESS.

It is an old story—a truth as old as the adventures of the first group of half-savage youths that started out to kill a mammoth.

They had heard their old, round-shouldered fathers talking about mammoth-killing. They had listened and learned. THAT WAS THEIR COLLEGE COURSE.

The day came when THEY started out to kill their own mammoth. They were graduates of the school that TELLS YOU HOW TO DO IT. They were entering on the life that says to you, "Now let's see you do it."

They followed the tracing of the mammoth over the deep snow and through the cold swamp—something very different from the gentle art of LISTENING TO STORIES of mammoth-killing by the cave man's smoke fire.

The young graduates to-day go out in pursuit of the modern mammoth—BIG SUCCESS. In the colleges and in the schools they have heard told the story of success, and how to get it. They have had given to them the knowledge that is supposed to bring success.

BUT GETTING IT is very different from reading about it.

Up hill, over sharp rocks, disappointments, sorrows, failures, lies the path.

The boy that seemed dull in the class will pass rapidly and leave behind the "bright boy" in some cases. And in others the bright boy, unusually gifted, only for study but for material achievement, will seem to climb up the hill as though on wings.

Some will fall and stay down. Others will learn from every fall.

Everyone that will can climb high enough on that hill to get a real view of life and real success, and, above all, the most important thing in the whole world, which is the right to say, "I have done my best."

Dire Yellow Journalism

Copyright, 1910, by American Journal-Examiner

The other day this editorial column said: "Long before we white folks came to America, the Indians buried their chief with his favorite horse, his bows and arrows, tomahawks and other weapons." Many centuries before any white man came here there is no doubt that the Indians buried a dead chief with his most important property—including, possibly, a wife or two. To bury property in the graves of big people is very much older than the pyramids. The custom dates farther back, probably, than a thousand Halsey street lights—which would be 75,000 years.

But IT ISN'T TRUE that the Indians buried the chief's favorite horse with the chief before white people came to America—because the Indians didn't have any horses until the Spaniards brought the fully developed horse here—IN ALL PROBABILITY.

It is possible, of course, that some stunted ponies may have struggled across the continent on a trail from the Behring Strait—long-legged Northern ponies. But horses, if they existed at all, were not plentiful here, and chiefs didn't have them to bury until the white men had arrived. Our apologies to our erudite readers, who will "keep in mind and remember," however, that the four-toed horse and some of his later descendants were here hundreds of centuries before white men or red men had ever been seen on earth.

Perfect Circus of Brains

It Is Open to All and Its Name Is Harvard University

Much newspaper space is devoted to-day to an account of Harvard commencement. A mere list of the distinguished men present shows that Harvard commencement gathers more brains, more sheer intellect, more trained thought and more applied learning than almost any other occasion in the Greater Boston year. It is truly a "perfect circus of brains," to speak of it with self-respect.

Most of this brain-power, this intellect, this learning and this able thought centred at Harvard commencement to-day is of the college ilk, self. Most of the honorary degrees, the oratory, the faculty, the professors, instructors and others who are a part of the big college's daily life. To-day is the annual delivery of the finished product of the collegiate year. Graduates go and new collegians come. But the main brains, the intellectuality, the "class," stay there year in and year out with undiminished vigor.

This tremendous, unrivalled intellectual force, laboring daily with ever-increasing ability, must and does make for great good. It teaches and, while it teaches, it studies how to teach best, how to make its teachings available to the greatest number and how to gather as many young men as possible within its collegiate gates.

In these latter objects it is eminently successful. Harvard has been styled a "rich man's college," on account of its own wealth, its prestige and the number of sons of the rich who go there.

But it is equally the college for the poor youth. It has big scholarships and many sources of self-help open to the ambitious.

It is to-day's planting time for the helping deserving youth. Scores of graduates could tell of financial aid they have received from the college in one way and another.

It is in this material way—wholly outside of the intellectual side of collegiate administration—that the brains of Harvard work for splendid result.

Like calls to Mrs. If any young man has brains enough to get through college and be a credit to the college and to himself in so doing, let him not be discouraged through lack of money. Let him take his brains to the place where they specialize in that commodity. Harvard is a genuine institution. And the young man of a genuine seeker after knowledge he will not be unwelcome.

William R. Hearst Interviewed by "El Imparcial," a Leading Newspaper of Mexico

Predicts War With Japan—Is Called the Napoleon of the American Press.

From El Imparcial, Mexico, D. F., Thursday, March 31, 1910.

"THERE WILL BE WAR BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES AND JAPAN," SAYS THE NAPOLEON OF THE AMERICAN PRESS.

"I have the firm conviction that Japan is arming herself cautiously to attack the United States, and that within a few years the world will witness one of the most terrible wars for commercial predominance."

Those were the words of William Randolph Hearst, multi-millionaire and great newspaper man, when a reporter of El Imparcial asked him the cable dispatches which told of the capture of several Japanese spies in the Philippine Islands.

Mr. Hearst spoke with an air of profound sincerity, and, enlarging upon his first declaration, said:

"The United States does not look for war. The American people is opposed to armed quarrels, but if one is forced they will be ready to answer the call of patriotism.

"That Japan has been arming herself since the end of the Russo-Japanese War can be said with perfect truth. She has not only enlarged her navy, but has increased her military service class that way, instead of diminishing it by disbanding her armies, as is the custom for nations in time of peace.

"Japan has steadily and rapidly increased her armed forces. The means, evidently, that Japan is making preparation for an extraordinary struggle, and that struggle can only mean a war with the United States. JAPAN WANTS THE PHILIPPINES.

"In my opinion," continued Mr. Hearst, "Japan desires to acquire possession of the Philippine Islands, and also the Island of Hawaii. The attitude of this Oriental country can be explained in no other way. It is notable that the expression, 'Asia for the Asiatics,' has been growing and is strikingly on the increase in the island nation.

"The Philippines, on account of their territorial extension and their proximity to Japan, constitute a coveable country. The Hawaiian Islands, though small and of little agricultural development, nevertheless make an ideal naval base in the Pacific Ocean.

"Japan has a strong people, anxious for martial and commercial adventure. She needs expansion, because her territory is already insufficient, and the demands of foreign commerce will oblige the Government to obtain territorial expansion.

"The Philippine Islands furnish little or nothing to the United States, but, on the contrary, my country has to appropriate large amounts for the support of the local administration of the islands, and for the development of modern and civilizing ideas.

"However, it may be understood that the United States will not permit Japan to acquire those islands. The fact that they form a part of our possessions gives the matter a national character, and before giving up the Philippine Islands the United States would, of course, engage in war. The conditions in the Orient and the activities of Japan emphasize the general necessity for increasing the American navy power."

The celebrated North American newspaper man, leader of a great part of the public opinion of the neighboring country, stopped talking for a moment, in the midst of a shower of paper arrows on the table, and showed to the reporter a copy of the New York American. That paper was profuse in editorials and reports on the necessity of pacification of the world and the disarmament of nations.

"This forms a part of my campaign," said Mr. Hearst. "I am a great partisan of peace, and through my newspapers I am working for the establishment of a supreme tribunal of arbitration, that may enlarge upon that of The Hague, and be of greater strength and justice.

"The United St... s has recently increased its navy and will continue augmenting other powerful units of navy warfare. This does not mean that the United States has the slightest bellicose intentions. If our nations make their navies stronger, the United States must do the same, looking for self-protection."

Afterward Mr. Hearst spoke about the necessity of the United States building the Panama Canal, and said that the reports are false which suggested a failure in the work of cutting through the isthmus. He said the canal must be finished by 1916, and that the work done up to the present time is so good as to get in shape to

Mr. Hearst and his party made a call on the President of the republic, General Don Porfirio Diaz, yesterday morning, and talked to him for a few minutes in the most cordial manner.

He Writes About Pa's New Invention

Copyrighted, 1910, by WILLIAM F. KIRK.

I HAVE a letter somewhere, and Pa, it is from the Automobile Association, says he is writing the same as the secretary always writes when he wants to tell you there are three buttons, so you'll think there is only one. Pa has invented a horn. He started Comic Songs. A all I have to do is squeeze it, and it goes out and gets me a sandwich, & then press that button & say "Home, James," and it will take me home. It will press the button, & I want you to understand that it presses three times. There is one to wind the instrument and one to make the noise. The third button is to send Aunt Amelia Spinster home.

That day he wore a lovely steeve-less dress.

It sounded like a troop of horses as he started his automobile horn. And the car was sticking slowly down the street. Well, sir, there is now class to that automobile horn. It is the most classy number knobs of pure bell in those days. Pa has got the finest horn in the city. I am proud of my daddy's horn. It is the finest of my daddy's possessions. That will be attended to, and Pa, I will not tell you anything about it, but I will tell you how nice that it is

IRELAND LAYS VATICAN STIR TO METHODISTS

NEW YORK, June 30.—The action taken by the Vatican in connection with the proposed audience of Colonel Roosevelt is upheld in a reply to the address of the Board of Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church which Archbishop Ireland of St. Paul contributes to the North American Review.

The archbishop cites the cases of Seth Low and Mr. Fairbanks as being instances illustrating his claim that each visit of a public man of America to the Methodist College in Rome has being seized by the representatives of the Methodist Church as an occasion for insulting the Vatican. He claims that the Methodist preachers' work is chiefly confined to proselyting.

Respecting the Roosevelt incident, he says: "So far as precedents are concerned, the Vatican could not but fear that pressure might be brought to bear on him to induce him to lend his favor to the Institute of Via Venti Settembre. The more illustrious the visitor, the more were the risks he ran on his guard. Unfortunately the message of the Vatican reached Mr. Roosevelt under cover of comments from the hand of the American Ambassador to the Quirinal, and was read in the glare of those comments.

"Circumstances, let us say, conspired to defeat an undertaking which was sure to be, had Mr. Roosevelt and the Cardinal Secretary of State come face to face.

"However, as things were the audience was made impossible.

"The attitude of the Vatican toward the Methodist mission, must not be other than what it is. If in this attitude there is intolerance, it is the intolerance of vile result and treacherous fraud. With persons differing from it in creed, honorable in their sincerity and belief and well mannered in their bearing, the Vatican is always tolerant, most courteous. But as was the Saviour himself, so is the Vatican severe and intolerant when confronted by the Pharisee and the money-changer of the temple."

BULLET DROPS MAN PURSUED BY POLICEMAN

Caught, it is alleged, breaking into a food house of the New York Central Railroad at the Beacon Park yards, near the Cottage Farm station, in company with four other men, Joseph Demma, twenty-eight, of No. 8 Lopez street, Cambridge, was shot in the neck by Patrolman Michael Sullivan in a chase along the railroad tracks, and is in a serious condition at the City Hospital. His name is on the dangerous list, and he is not expected to recover.

Section Foreman Thomas Donahoe saw the five men fumbling with the lock on the tool house. He notified the police, and Sullivan was sent to the scene. When he arrived Benson was stationed at the door, while his four companions were standing about forty yards away.

Benson started to run, and Sullivan ordered him to stop. Benson threatened to shoot the policeman, and Sullivan fired at him. The bullet struck Benson in the neck and he dropped.

Sullivan and Foreman Donahoe then captured two others. They were arrested on a charge of larceny. To the police they gave their names as Edward, Kane, thirty-four, of No. 8 Watson street, Cambridge, and Timothy Sullivan, thirty-six, of No. 257 Putnam avenue, Cambridge. The other two men escaped, and the police are now searching for them.

FIVE CARRIED FROM BURNING LODGING HOUSE

Five persons, helpless from inhaling smoke, were rescued and half a dozen others fled panic-stricken to the street from a fire in the three-and-a-half story brick dwelling at No. 342 Cambridge street, West End, early to-day.

Two women and a child, who were found partially overcome by smoke on the second floor of the building, were taken down on a ladder by firemen, and two men were carried from the third floor to the street by policemen.

Policeman John Campbell of the Joy street station was passing the house when he heard the cry of "Fire!" from within. He sounded an alarm and returned to the building and rushed up the stairs. The entire house was filled with smoke, and the inmates were groping their way down the stairs. Campbell helped several to the street. He was soon joined by Sergeant Michael Sullivan. After everybody on the lower floors had escaped from the burning building the policemen made their way to the third floor, where they found William Sheehan and J. Bishop groping their way about in the dense smoke, unable to find the stairway. Both men were nearly overcome, and the policemen were obliged to carry them down.

Started in Storeroom.

The fire started in a storeroom on the second floor, and before it was discovered had eaten its way through the door into the hallway, cutting off the escape by the stairs of those sleeping in rooms on the north side of the building.

The flames were rapidly spreading when the firemen arrived. Several firemen climbed through the windows of the second floor, where they found Mrs. Mary Medeiros asleep in a room adjoining the burning storeroom. She had not been awakened by the cries of the other lodgers, and was fast suffocating when found by the firemen. She was passed out of the window and carried down the ladder to the street.

Dozen Lodgers in House.

Mrs. Annie Tirrell and her three-year-old daughter, Mabel, were found in another room on the same floor. Mrs. Tirrell was hysterical. After making several frantic efforts to pass the blazing room in order to reach the stairs, Mrs. Tirrell and child ran to the window of an adjoining room and screamed for help.

The house was used as a lodging house, with Mrs. Johnson as housekeeper. There was also a dozen lodgers in the building. The firemen confined the fire to the storeroom on the second floor. It is not known what caused the blaze. All those taken from the building were in night clothes and were cared for by neighbors.

HARVARD I. STILL REFUSES TO FLY

The fourth attempt to fly the Harvard I., the Crimson aeroplane, also proved a failure. President Charles J. Glidden of the Aero Club of New England, Mr. Willard, father of the St. Louis boy aviator, and a crowd of several hundred persons gathered on Soldiers Field to see the flight, but were disappointed.

Professor Martin dandled the aeroplane, but was unable to get it to rise, and finally abandoned the attempt. On the first attempt he found his brakes would not work. The second time a stock cock on the engine broke off and the third time the machine only skidded along the ground.

DRIVER'S SKULL BROKEN.

John Cuttle, driver for James Wilkie, at No. 8 Back Bay, was found unconscious in a pool of his own blood at the foot of the stable stairs early to-day. Examination at the City Hospital showed that his skull was fractured. Cuttle is forty-eight years old and married.

IMPORTER PAYS $100,000 BACK HAT DUTIES

NEW YORK, June 30.—Franklin MacVeagh, Secretary of the Treasury, came here for a conference regarding a matter that is looked upon by the customs authorities here as important. As a result of the Panama hat undervaluation casualty following as it did the sugar fraud prosecutions and the other underweighing litigation, an importer well known as one of the leading tariff payers in this port, has been forced to settle for undervaluations also known by Collector Loeb or his men, moved forward to the legal department of the Government and not likely ever to have become called to their attention.

It was hinted that the amount would be near $100,000. It was held that one of the stipulations of this importer was that his name should be withheld. This will be done, it was reported, whether an agreement is reached or not. If no agreement is reached the Government will not prosecute, it was said, as it has given the man practical immunity by permitting him to submit the evidence against himself.

KIDNAPERS PHONE FATHER BOY IS SLAIN

NEW YORK, June 30.—Dr. Mariano Schmeca received a telephone message at his home to-day informing him that his three-year-old son, Michael, who was kidnapped two weeks ago and held for a Black Hand ransom of $8,000, had been murdered. The physician said he was satisfied that the man at the other end of the telephone was one of the kidnapers. He also declared it as his belief that the man was telling the truth. When his wife learned of the message she fainted. She is now at the point of death as the result of worrying over the kidnaping.

"I am compelled to believe that those fiends have harmed my poor little boy," said Dr. Schmeca. "If it is true I shall devote the best of my life to running them to earth. And when I find them I shall not have to appeal to American laws.

"And I will find them. Mark my words, I will find them by pursuing their own tactics."

After Dr. Schmeca had received the message to-day he communicated with police headquarters and the telephone call was traced to the ferry house at St. George, Staten Island. The telephone which was used there is a slot machine and is in a booth. It was impossible to get any further trace of the man who called up the Schmeca home.

CHILD DROPS FOUR STORIES; IS UNHURT

Carmelo Pulfro, the seven-months-old child of Mr. and Mrs. Dominic Pulfro of No. 150 Merrimac street, fell from a four-story window of his home and escaped practically without injury. Stephena Pulfro, six years old, was sitting at an open window with her baby brother in her arms, when she suddenly lost her hold upon him and he toppled out of the window.

The child struck the shoulders of Joseph Ferrero, who was passing. He bounced off Ferrero's shoulder and fell to the ground. He was hurried to the Relief Hospital, where the doctors said that, aside from a few bruises, he had escaped unhurt.

LEAPS FROM BRIDGE AND DROWNS SELF

Several persons saw a young man, supposed to be Richard Callahan, twenty years, of Corey street, Charlestown, jump off the new Charlestown bridge and drown. When just over the draw on the Boston side of the bridge the man removed his coat vest, hat, collar and tie and made the leap.

"CARMEN SYLVA," ROUMANIAN QUEEN, AT DEATH'S DOOR

CARMEN SYLVA IS NEAR DEATH

BUCHAREST, June 30.—Queen Elizabeth of Roumania (Carmen Sylva), who has been ill for several days with apprendicitis, suffered a relapse to-day and her physicians announced that there was no hope that they could save her life.

Queen Elizabeth is sixty-seven years old. She was born Princess of Wied and was married to King Carlos in 1869. She is one of the first poets of the Balkans, a maker of charming fairy tales, composer of opera and writer of drama. She speaks six languages, has founded schools, asylums, hospitals, and has generally devoted her life to self-improvement and to uplifting her Roumanian people. Her great sorrow was the death of her four-year-old daughter, the Princess Marie.

Every dealer who buys a crate of a certain brand of cigarettes has found two extra boxes of a new brand packed in with his original order. These extra boxes were supplied free, the dealer was informed by the manufacturer.

But notice has been served on the trade that after July 1 the "extra two" will not be included.

In the case of cigarettes that are packed twenty in a box the manufacturer will reduce the capacity of the box to sixteen cigarettes.

The ball game, general sports, besides the news of the world, will be just as interesting to you no matter where you are this Summer on your vacation, so have the evening and Sunday AMERICAN mailed to you. It will cost you nothing extra; we pay the postage. The price to you is the same as you pay in Boston.

FIRE DAMAGES BACK BAY ART STUDIOS

Fire starting from spontaneous combustion caused a damage of $2,000 in the Lang Studios at No. 6 Newbury street, Back Bay. Several valuable paintings, rare bric-a-brac and a costly pipe organ were damaged by the flames, but the firemen succeeded in checking them before they reached the works of art.

The fire started in the basement, where decorators had left some oil waste, and spreading up through the hallway gutted the apartments of Arthur Foote, A. Pressman and John A. Lord. Fifteen artists were in the building at the time and were driven to the street.

MRS. COLEMAN NOW SEEKS REST

Exhausted by the stress of events of the last three months, Mrs. Walter G. Coleman, mother of George W. Coleman, who is serving a fifteen-year term at the Greenfield Jail for looting the National City Bank of Cambridge, has left Cambridge to seek rest in New Hampshire.

According to word from Greenfield, Coleman is holding up well under his trouble. His work has been light thus far. Coleman seems reasonably cheerful and contented.

PERETZ PAID GIRLS' FARES TO PANAMA

Max Peretz, now bing tried before Judge Ely in the lower criminal court on charges connecting him with "white slave" traffic, was to-day positively identified by the Boston agent of a Panama steamship line as the man who came to him and arranged for the passage of three women to Panama.

The identification was made by Herbert P. Swain. He followed Mrs. Jeannette Abrams, whose testimony was concluded this morning. Mrs. Abrams is the detective employed by the White Slave Ward Society and was known to Peretz under the name of Julia Adams.

Swain said that Peretz came to him and asked for passage reservations for three women. Later he said that there might be five. Finally he came and said that he wanted passage for himself, Frieda Peretz, Mrs. Ida Weinberg and Miss Julia Adams. Later Peretz saw Swain and paid him $1200 for the tickets. This paid for four passages and Peretz said that he and his wife were going and Mr. and Mrs. Weinberg. Swain asked about Julia Adams and Peretz said he would let him know later about her.

An attempt was made by Attorney Scharton, counsel for Peretz, to have Mrs. Abrams admit under cross-examination that she offered to pay her own fare to Panama. The witness denied this. She admitted that she showed Peretz a check for $500 which the officials of the Watch and Ward Society had given her.

At the close of Mr. Abrams' testimony Attorney Scharton complained to Judge Ely that representatives of the Watch and Ward were coaching witnesses. Judge Ely warned them.

TOBACCO LAW HITS SMOKER

One of the first to feel the effects of the new internal revenue law, which becomes operative to-night after midnight, is the smoker.

The law affects smokers' tobacco and cigarettes directly.

Cigarette boxes will be reduced in size, holding eight instead of ten cigarettes hereafter.

The use of the fractional "third" in measuring ounces of smoking tobacco is to be supplanted by "fourths." Hereafter the pouch which has contained one ounce and one-third will contain one ounce and one-fourth, but will retail for the old price.

Retail dealers will lose one perquisite, the Princess Marie.

EIGHTH BATTALIONS END BATTLE TODAY

SOUTH FRAMINGHAM, June 30.—Two battalions of the Eighth Infantry are making a desperate effort to capture the stores located in the State Arsenal. The other battalion is holding the men in check in Saxonville. The final battle will be somewhere to-day.

The most practical thing concerning the matter of the men cooking their own rations. No cooks went with the troops, and the men had to look out for themselves.

GRAIN RATES WILL STAY UP; RAILWAYS WIN

WASHINGTON, June 30.—The Interstate Commerce Commission, in an important decision, today cancelled the previous order requiring railroads to reduce rates on flour and other grain products from Buffalo to New York and New England points. It has been decided that the old rates are not unreasonable and shall stand.

The opinion is a result of rehearing of the Banner Milling Company vs. the New York Central Railroad, and the famous Jennison cases regarding rates to and from the Northwest, in Buffalo. Since the original hearing the commission held that the expenses of operation on the part of the railroads have materially increased. It is claimed that the reduced rates from the Northwest, as proposed in the Jennison cases, would disturb the entire traffic line from milling centres on the Missouri River and West and would create a state of discrimination against cities in the Middle West.

Classification Stands.

The commission also announced that it would not suspend the official classification of freight rates, which was filed to take effect July 1. This announcement affects all roads in Eastern territory. There are over six thousand items on ratings in this classification and only fifty-eight changes, of which twenty-eight are reductions and thirty advances, the latter including principal increases are the carload minimum on some exhibition rates, 10,000 to 11,000 pounds, and an advance in the classification of automobiles from first class to 150 per cent. of first class. The commission is not satisfied that those items should be suspended.

High Tariffs Filed.

A number of railroads operating from the Central West to Eastern points filed with the commission to-day tariffs of increased class rates to become effective August 1. The rates will be increased from 10 to 15 per cent. The class rate from Chicago to New York will be as varied as follows: First class, 25 cents; second class, 13 cents; third class, ten cents, and fourth class, five cents per 100 pounds. Similar advances will be made between all other points in the Central West and seaboard points.

BOY DIES OF HURT IN FALL FROM TREE

MALDEN, June 30.—Francis Connors, fourteen, son of Michael Connors, of No. 4 School street, Malden, died at the Malden Hospital as a result of injuries sustained when he fell from a cherry tree and struck a picket fence. The boy, in company with others, was picking cherries when a dead limb on which he was standing, broke and he fell a distance of fifteen feet onto the fence.

ASHER HINDS IS NOMINATED FOR CONGRESS

PORTLAND, Me., June 30.—As the climax to one of the bitterest political fights that the First Congressional District of Maine has ever seen, a fight which in this section of the State has until within two weeks overshadowed the interest in State and county politics to a degree never before known, Asher C. Hinds was nominated by acclamation in the Republican district convention to-day as the candidate to succeed Hon. Amos L. Allen, who retires after many years service.

The scene was the most remarkable ever witnessed at a district convention. Mr. Allen himself presided. The cheers which greeted his appearance double in volume when W. F. Spear of South Portland, speaking in behalf of Judge award C. Reynolds of the same city who ran third in the race, announced that Mr. Reynolds with drew and moved the nomination of Mr. Hinds by acclamation.

When Colonel Frederick Hale, son of Senator Hale, who had been the opponent of Hinds, rose and in a straightforward speech expressed his disappointment that he had been unable to secure enough delegates, but pledged his hearties support to Hinds, the 300 delegates present and the 200 spectators went wild, and for five minutes the convention shouted.

Mr. Hinds, who is the clerk of the House, and the man who at Chicago three days ago prompted the Speaker for many years, was nominated by Dr. Alfred King of Portland. He alluded to Mr. Hinds as the logical successor to Cannon as Speaker.

BURGLARS PLUNDER AT EAST BRAINTREE

EAST BRAINTREE, June 30—The residence of Frederick J. Smith at No. 84 Hayward street was entered, ransacked from cellar to garret and property valued at almost $1,000 stolen, while members of the family were away.

Every drawer, cupboard and trunk in the house was broken open and the contents strewn about the floors. Many things which the burglars did not find of carrying away were destroyed.

There's a mighty attractive little side scent fund for to-day in connection with the Free Ice Cream Fund if you only knew it.

Well, here it is. Some of the peachiest girls in the "Up and Down Broadway" company, now playing at the Shubert Theatre, are going to the Dove-Phillies doubleheader at the South End baseball grounds to collect cash for the Free Ice Cream Fund.

If you go to the game be a REAL sport. Chip in something toward the Free Ice Cream Fund which the girls are trying to boost along.

Everyone is interested in this project of giving free ice cream on Boston boys and girls as part of the Safe and Sane Fourth movement in Boston. Money is coming in daily to the BOSTON AMERICAN, which has opened its columns to the subscription list at the request of the Safe and Sane Fourth Committee. All contributions are promptly forwarded to Mr. Robert Treat Paine, Jr., as custodian of the fund.

More Money Is Needed.

But more money is needed, and it is needed NOW. This isn't a collection for Christmas. It's for the Fourth of July. The Fourth comes Monday—sure, the day of the big fight. You're on. So there isn't much time left to send in the dime or quarter or dollar or whatever you mean to send.

It's a lully idea, this one of giving the kids free ice cream instead of having them blow themselves up with cannon crackers or shoot themselves full of gunpowder and lockjaw.

Chip in toward the Free Ice Cream Fund. Send your bit in or your little bit in with the appended coupon.

If you go to the ball game at the National League grounds to-day don't forget the pretty actresses who are there in the interest of the Free Ice Cream Fund.

Plans for distributing the ice cream have been made.

There will be a dozen booths on the Common, and there will be distributing places all over the city. There will be Free ice cream at the ward rooms in Wards 7 and 8, and at the Bowdoin, Bunker Hill, Hancock, Quincy, Washington, Wendell Phillips and Winthrop schoolhouses. In different places around Boston police will distribute to children tickets which will entitle the holder to a plate of ice cream. It will be a good sized plate too. The four wheel policemen will distribute the tickets will be sold in the BOSTON AMERICAN.

Watch the columns of this newspaper for the announcement!

The Boston Safe and Sane Fourth of July Committee has headquarters at No. 6 Beacon street. The Executive Committee includes Timothy J. Buckley, Timothy A. Butler, Miss Lotta A. Clark, Mitchell Dreiman, Edward E. Moore, William Orr and John W. De Bruyn, secretary.

POLICE HUNT FIREBUGS IN SOUTH BOSTON

State Fire Marshal Silas Smith is today investigating the cause of a fire which last night destroyed the two-story unoccupied frame building formerly used as a sawmill at No. 316 First street, South Boston. The building belonged to the Monks estate. Chief Mullen to-day said: "I think this fire was the work of an incendiary."

The damage was about $4,000. Two alarms were pounded as the burning building was situated in the heart of a densely populated tenement district, nearly all of the houses there being old wooden structures.

While the fire was at its height, the sparks from the burning old sawmill were falling in every direction, giving the firemen concern to prevent a disastrous conflagration.

The first alarm was rung in at 8:52 o'clock, but by this time the old structure was doomed, the flames shooting high into the air through the roof. A one-story wooden building adjoining, used as a lumber warehouse, was badly damaged. A stable just across the street, too, caught fire when the blaze was at its worst. The fireman managed to put this out.

The fire which destroyed the sawmill started in the basement of the structure. Before the alarm sent in the flames had gotten under into the walls and through the roof, dooming it.

To-day Chief Mullen said: "The building has been the scene of fires in the last year nearly every time under the same conditions. There is a crowd of fellows who are in the habit of loafing there. The police have tried to drive them out times, to drive them out of this building. Everything points to the fire as having been the work of an incendiary, and I have reported the matter to the State Fire Marshal who are beginning an investigation."

FIRE TAKES SHIPS, ICEHOUSE, FOREST

RICHMOND, Me., June 30.—Two four masted schooners and the same number of ice houses, owned by the American Ice Company, were destroyed by fire here.

The loss to the ice houses, containing about 50,000 tons of ice, is estimated at $50,000, while that to the schooners, the Henry L. Peckham and Young Brothers, is $60,000.

As the ice houses were situated on the Kennebec River, near the mouth of the Maine Central Railroad, it is believed that the blaze from it passed unnoticed until the structures.

After destroying a small stable near the ice houses, the fire, backed by a stiff wind, jumped the Kennebec River, and within a few hours of an hour had burned over more than fifty acres of woodland. It is still burning.

$50 FIRE IN A BARN.

The sum was so hot to-day that it caused a fire to start from spontaneous combustion in the barn of Mrs. L. G. Stone, No. 31 Fairfield street, Dorchester. The fire caused damages of $50. The barn was filled with hay and the intense heat caused a number of the firemen to be almost overcome.

Washing the Hair

Doctor Lassar, the famous German professor, says the first step toward stopping the falling out of hair and toward a healthy scalp generally is to keep the scalp clean by washing. This should be done daily in the beginning, and to the scalp assume a more normal condition, the head can be washed less frequently. But don't make the mistake of using ordinary soaps and shampoos. Birt's Head Wash, the new scientific preparation, is made of Refined Soap, Cochin Cocoanut Oil, White of Eggs, Glycerin and Salicylic Acid. This formula is so generally recognized as proper that you are invited to ask any physician what he thinks about it. It removes the dirt, dandruff and disease germs, and thus causes the hair to take on new vigor naturally. Tube 25c, jars 50c.

NO SECTION IN BIG MEETING OF TEACHERS

James Y. Joyner, State superintendent of instruction in North Carolina and president of the National Education Association, whose convention opens Monday, has arrived in Boston, inspected the new headquarters, heard reports from the secretary, Irwin Shepard, and reckons that no president the association ever had can boast of meeting better arrangements for the monster conference than those which the local committee has completed.

During the past year Mr. Joyner has been a busy man. Education is on the boom in North Carolina, and he was glad of an opportunity to leave his office for a short time, especially to come to Boston.

With Mrs. Joyner he came to New York by boat, and since registering at the Lenox has been kept busy meeting old friends and listening to reports from other officers.

In speaking of the coming convention, he said: "I expect to see one of the largest conventions we have ever held, and I am sure that we are to be royally entertained. At no place have we found such sumptuous headquarters as Boston has provided.

Ideals Need Not Conflict.

"In coming to Boston I realise that the teachers are to visit one of the great educational centres of the country. I do not like to talk of schools of the North, for comparisons with the south are sure to crop out.

"While I am in Boston I do not wish to say anything which could savor of sectionalism. We of the South have our ideals and provincialisms, as I suppose the North has. Each section, I believe, can continue to have these without friction. But we are just as much nationalised in the South as are the people of the North. Certainly, at this, a national convention, we do not wish to enter upon any comparisons of merit in sections of the country.

"In my own State we are just beginning to develop our high and normal schools. We have not had the money to do so before, but the people are bravely carrying large taxes to make this possible. I am, as it happens, president of the Southern Association of Superintendents, which sends your makes a pilgrimage to some section of the country and studies the schools.

"I think it is an excellent plan. At least it has prevented us from making many mistakes. We have visited the schools of the East, and last year studied the progressive agricultural schools of the West. Next year we hope to study some of the large consolidated schools.

Leaders Already Arriving.

The various committees of the school teachers are working early and late to bring to a final completion the broad plans which have been mapped out. In fact, the school teachers are too busy for the visitors is going on in their numerous committee meetings, and greet all inquiries with a mysterious smile and a "You just wait and see."

Certainly they have worked wonders with the Art Museum, where the reception rooms and other features are arranged by the local committee. Over eight exhibits by various institutions and public departments of Boston, and New England. These exhibits have been arranged artistically and with care, and to properly see them all will require many hours.

In the meantime the registration committee is making arrangements for the influx of visitors, which will begin to-day. Several of the officers and prominent speakers have already registered, and to-day their number is to be greatly augmented.

FINES IMPOSED IN MILK CASES

Eleven South Boston merchants were haled into police court to-day before Judge Fallon by Inspector James O. Jordan of the Boston Board of Health, charged with selling milk without a license. The cases, eight were continued until July 6, when they could be represented by counsel. Fines of $15 each were imposed upon Elmer E. Given of No. 120 I street, Max Strassel of No. 108 Dorchester street and Robie N. Miller of No. 390 Dorchester street. Miller said, but Given and Strassel appealed and were held in $300 bail each for the grand jury.

FIREWORKS IGNITED BY SUN; LOSS $35

Fireworks in the window of the variety store of James Peters on the Neponset Dorchester avenue, Dorchester, became ignited from the heat of the sun to-day and caused a fire which damaged the stock and contents to the value of $35. An alarm was sounded from Box 191. The store is situated in a one-story wooden structure.

BIG PREMIUM ANNOUCEMENT==WATCH SUNDAY'S AMERICAN

TAFT, ROOSEVELT AND LODGE IN CONFERENCE

don't know the hour that he shall call, as that depends upon when Justice Moody can beat me us.

"Yes, we had a narrow escape last evening from being run down by a Boston & Maine train in Cambridge at the Park street crossing. The gate tender was dropped the gate immediately in front of us with a train bearing down on us seemed to be very stupid. It was a narrow escape.

"That is about all the information I can give you. Colonel Roosevelt and I are very old friends, and I am trying to get as much of his time alone on this visit as possible."

President Taft was about early to-day and ready for an outing on the golf links at Myopis. He left for the golf grounds at 9 o'clock, where he met his friend, John Hays Hammond. The skies were blue, the sunshine streaming from the heavens with a delightful breeze. It was an ideal day for a golf game and the President smiled like a boy as he sped away in his big touring car.

The luncheon hour at Nahant was said to be from 1 to 30 o'clock. Colonel Roosevelt and Senator Lodge, after a long talk into the night, renewed their chat to-day. They breakfasted at 9 o'clock and then took a stroll together in the fresh morning sunlight. After this Colonel Roosevelt gave attention to a great bundle of mail. There were from 100 to 150 letters.

The home of Senator Lodge was inaccessible to-day to those who were not members of the family and had no engagement to meet the two distinguished politicians. On one side is a stone and picket fence, with a locked gate, and on the other side the sea.

Hughes Speaks at Harvard.

Governor Hughes delivered an address at Harvard University to-day and it was expected that he would journey here in time for luncheon with President Taft at Burgess Point, where the President's summer home is situated, was cut off from the public to-day. All of the streets and lanes leading to that section were guarded and those who were not entitled to gain entrance were allowed through only by card. There was a large guard of local police and a posse of secret service men.

It was learned to-day that the "mysterious" man who had a half hour's talk with Colonel Roosevelt and Governor Hughes at the home of President Lowell in Cambridge yesterday afternoon before Roosevelt jumped into the New York political breach, was William M. Chadbourne, a Wall street lawyer and a member of the New York Republican and Union League Clubs.

It is believed that Chadbourne's talk with Roosevelt had a lot to do with the colonel's vehement action in the matter of the New York primary bill before the New York Legislature at this time.

Many Topics to Discuss.

The Republican situation in New York, the insurgent movement in the Republican ranks, the criticism of President Taft's administration on account of the tariff, the Ballinger-Pinchot controversy, and other matters are among the questions to be discussed. It is probable that plans for the next Republican national campaign will be framed.

Friends of the Taft administration predict that the ex-President will come out in vigorous support of the Taft policies. It is pointed out that no one at this moment knows how matters stand between the President and Roosevelt. They had no direct communication so far as is known, during the colonel's hunting tour and his trip through Europe. The first message that passed between them was the day the big hunter arrived in America. The President then received a letter mailed by Colonel Roosevelt in London, a ship across on the same ship. No inkling of its contents has ever been given. However, the fact that a letter was sent has given hope to New York Republicans that the ex-President will be lined up with them.

Throws Help to Hughes.

On the other hand the anti-administration Republicans here profess to see Roosevelt help from the fact that since his return he has received in audience some rapid insurgent Republicans, notably Senator La Follette. Since the La Follette interview, which evidently was pleasing to that insurgent leader, the anti-Taft men have had a feeling that when Roosevelt declares himself he will be found in the insurgent camp.

Roosevelt declared when he arrived back in America that he would make no political speech nor take any action in politics for two months. Yesterday, less than two weeks after his arrival, he sent a message to New York urging the Republican organization to back Governor Hughes in his fight for direct nominations. He declared he was unable to keep his resolution after Governor Hughes had explained that he needed help. With this step taken, political leaders say that Roosevelt will be in the fight from now on. Rapid developments are expected after to-day's conference.

Colonel Roosevelt was the guest last night at Nahant of Senator Lodge. They talked until midnight while the house was guarded on the outside by about the entire Nahant police force. What their discussion was is not known, but its importance is emphasized by the fact that Senator Lodge took unusual precaution against interruption by callers or interviewers.

Colonel Roosevelt and Senator Lodge left Nahant this forenoon on their way to Beverly. They made a brief stop in Boston and then motored to Beverly.

Colonel Roosevelt broke back into the political arena during the Harvard commencement. There he met Governor Hughes for the first time since his return from Africa. The colonel rushed up to Governor Hughes, gripped his hand and said: "This is fine. It's all fine to see you, Governor. I am glad you have pleased I am."

Later he whispered loudly enough for the bystanders to hear: "I don't understand how such a thing got around. Of course, I felt sure that you are getting out. You are the only man who can save the state."

The result of their talk became evident later, when on Roosevelt, 80, the ex-President, presided at the meeting of the Harvard Alumni Association.

In introducing Governor Hughes Roosevelt said: "I had intended to keep absolutely clear from any kind of public or political question after coming home, and I cabled myself and my resolution is right until I met the Governor, and he then explained to me that I had come back to live in New York now, that I had to help him out, and after a very brief conversation, I put up my hands and agreed to help him.

"I say I agreed to help him; I mean I say agreed to try to help him. That makes a difference. I haven't the slightest idea whether my efforts will do any good or not, but I have sent to the local committee in New York an emphatic appeal as I know how to send, asking that the Republicans of the state back up the Governor and pass the legislation affecting our political structure which the governor feels, which the best people throughout the state are growing more and more to feel to be essential to our wholesome political life.

Later, in reply to a written question as to the significance of his speech, Colonel Roosevelt wrote: "Study the vernacular of the Far West. I said that I had not intended to take any part in political questions, but when Hughes appealed to me as a public-spirited citizen I had to throw up my hands and start in to help him out."

Governor Hughes's reply to the Colonel was:

Thanks From Hughes.

"I desire to express my appreciation of the great service which to-day has been rendered, not to me, but to the people of the of New York, by its first citizen. I congratulate the people of the State of New York, and all those who, in other States are fighting the battles of public decency and honor, that at this time of his resumption of active participation in the great work of solving the problems of our imperial Commonwealth, he is doing in accordance with the opportunity which he has so frequently given for the first time since his return from Africa. The colonel rushed up to Governor Hughes, gripped his hand and said: "This is fine. It's all fine to see you, Governor. I am glad you have pleased I am.

"Later he whispered loudly enough for the bystanders to hear: "I don't understand how such a thing got around. Of course, I felt sure that you are getting out. You are the only man who can save the state."

The result of their talk became evident later, when on Roosevelt, 80, the ex-President, presided at the meeting of the Harvard Alumni Association.

Roosevelt to See Moody.

After to-day's conference at Beverly Colonel Roosevelt will return to Nahant with Senator Lodge. He will be the Senator's guest until to-morrow and intends before he returns to Oyster Bay to pay a visit to Justice William H. Moody, who is at the Corey Hill Hospital at Brookline. Before leaving Harvard commencement he said to a friend: "I want to see Moody. He is a fine fellow and I must see him if possible before I return home."

The Colonel has added a new expression to his already long and famous list. It is "son of a gun." He used it at Harvard in expressing his opinion of Farnham Bishop of the graduate school, who in an address on Socialism at the Government in demonstrating its practicability at Panama, praised the Colonel for starting the canal and giving him some credit for the excellent building structure which the power, the United States Corps of Engineers. After Bishop's speech the Colonel is talking with a friend declared, "That Bishop is a son of a gun. This is a new expression for the Colonel.

What Roosevelt thinks of his German speech was shown by a remark he made to Professor Munsterberg, whom he met at Harvard. Roosevelt, after saying it was "fine to see you," added, "I had a fine time in Germany, and I think my speech there was one of the best I made.

MAY KILL COBB BILL IN SPITE OF ROOSEVELT

ALBANY, N. Y., June 30.—Theodore Roosevelt's message to Lloyd C. Griscom indorsing the Cobb direct nomination bill, with certain amendments, fell like a bombshell in the camp of the opponents of the measure. Official Albany is discussing the probable effect of the message in the face of an adverse report on the unamended bill decided upon at a meeting of the assembly judiciary committee.

Not only did the committee vote nine to three to report the bill adversely, but in an accompanying statement the opinion is expressed that under the letter and spirit of the constitution the subject of primary reform should not have been submitted to or considered by the Legislature at an extraordinary session.

The assembly leaders had planned to put the measure to a vote to-day, confident of their ability to defeat it, but Colonel Roosevelt's message has decidedly upset things.

Despite the message several leading members of the assembly, including Speaker Wadsworth and Jesse Phillips, chairman of the Judiciary Committee, said their position was unchanged and that the action of the ex-President would not influence their votes.

HUGHES AT HARVARD ATTACKS CORRUPTION OF PUBLIC SERVANTS

In speaking on "Some Aspects of Our Democracy" before the Phi Beta Kappa Society of Harvard to Sanders Theatre to-day, Governor Charles E. Hughes of New York State flayed corruption, the special privilege evil and the lawyer-lobbyist. He deplored indiscriminate censure of public officers. He found that the press had improved in the latter respect. Trenchant sentences from his address were:

"The man who will not corrupt public officers, if he believes himself secure from discovery, in order to protect his business or to get what he wants or perhaps thinks he should have, is, unhappily, too rare.

"Spreading insidious influences are the efforts to secure and to hold improper privileges.

"The victories of democracy have been won against special privileges.

"To be a minister of justice is a privilege . . . but how shockingly this privilege is ignored . . . when lawyers become legislators to write statutes under retainers."

After introductory remarks on history and patriotism, Governor Hughes said, in part:

Must End Corruption.

We shall all agree on the necessity of unceasing effort to put an end to corruption in administrative offices and legislative halls. We may be gratified at the evidence of moral soundness in our people as frequently illustrated in the response of public men. But while exposure of gross corruption is unfailingly denounced, it is lamentably true that we do not have that measure of continuous and unrelenting resistance to corrupt influences which we have a right to expect from our citizens and particularly from those most favored by ability and success. The man who will not corrupt public officers, if he believes himself secure from discovery, in order to protect his business or to get what he wants or perhaps thinks he should have, is unhappily too rare. And despite the increasing number who go from college halls to the pursuits of the business world, there does not seem to be an increasing or the proportion of the number of those who realize that success can be too dearly purchased and that the first duty of a patriotic man of business is to conduct his business in a patriotic manner.

Victories of Democracy.

Placed by general consent in a different category, but breeding corruption and spreading insidious influences, are the efforts to secure and to hold improper privileges. The victories of democracy have been won against privilege. And the constant struggle must be to keep our institutions free from the blight of favoritism and of special grants at the expense of the general welfare.

To be associated with public affairs is frequently seems as though the security of the common interests—which are those of the first and essential consideration—will be the most difficult to maintain. The constant endeavor, prosecuted with a regrettable measure of success, to place men in public office who are not corrupt in the ordinary sense, but can be relied upon to serve some particular interest to which they owe primary allegiance, has honeycombed administration and legislation and statutes to a large extent a patchwork of special favors.

Much of this sort of thing is done without a sense of wrongdoing. The very naught of democratic spirit in those who thus contrive against the community, and its interest hushes its too feeble protest.

False Servants of People.

Under these conditions, there are those chosen as the representatives of the people to deliberate and decide according to their honest judgment as to what may be in the public interest, who are faithful with the announced policy of the party to which they belong, who merely ask what their masters want. They are there without independence, without manhood, to give what is demanded, to avert what is opposed. This practice of subjection to the agencies of democracy, and of using the necessary instrumentalities of free government against itself, is far more serious than any open attack upon our governmental system. Without fidelity in representation the institutions of free government are a mockery, and to secure fidelity in representation is of fundamental concern.

It would seem to be so simple for one faithfully to discharge his representative responsibility and thus realize the satisfaction and distinction of honorable service; it would seem to be so natural, that it could be taken for granted, and that, without thought and unprompted consideration we might proceed to the decision of controversies and disputes and policies. But experience teaches us and lessons to the contrary.

Opportunity of the Citizen.

Here every citizen has an opportunity to play his part and the part is influential in proportion to his weight and influence. Here the bar especially has a large responsibility. We cannot guilde our affairs or administer justice without the spirit of the bar, and of those trained in law. At every point we need the knowledge and guidance of experts. The bar rejoices in its traditions of independence and public spirit, and the life of a democratic community has rare opportunities and exceptional obligations to be a nobler one. Justice should any where be a position of dignity and power to be a minister of justice under democratic institutions is a privilege of vocation which cannot be overstated. But how shockingly this privilege is ignored and the opportunity perverted to base uses when lawyers become legislators to write statutes under retainers, or to cripple their activities in poisoning the springs of government!

Those who seek franchises are learning, and must learn ever in greater degree, that fair and candid proceedings are the best. That if they would have rights, they must discharge duties; and that if they would prosper they must do so under fair conditions and give just return.

The Spirit of Lawlessness.

The sure basis of enterprise must be laid in the public confidence, in respect for our institutions, in the recognition of the supremacy of the public interest, in guarantees of reasonable advantage, and in due regard for the demands of honor.

The spirit of lawlessness is the evils to which I have referred, but a disposition which does not condone any such spirit of lawlessness. I do not refer to those flagrant deeds of violence and disorder which, in their defiance of law and order, cannot be too strongly condemned, but rather do I refer to what is really more serious and menacing, to a spirit of reliance with the necessary processes of government.

The lawless spirit is frequently manifested in reckless abuse and indiscriminate censure of public officers. In most important agencies of democracy are, after all, the men who are responsible for the influences that shape public opinion. No more important public trust than he who is in a position of power, to be used for service, that is the trust of all and, bound by obligation, is the master of none. Having surrendered him self to none of the party which makes appeal to the thoughtless and ignorant, in the interest alone of the higher honor which should be the reward of fidelity. Those who cultivate the true democratic spirit will be as earnest in their support of faithful officers as they are unsparing in their condemnation of the faithless.

Hughes on Corruption of Our Public Servants

The man who will not corrupt public officers if he believes himself secure from discovery, in order to protect his business or to get what he wants or perhaps thinks he should have, is, unhappily, too rare.

Spreading insidious influences are the efforts to secure and to hold improper privileges.

To be a minister of justice is a privilege * * * but how shockingly this privilege is ignored * * * when lawyers become legislators to write statutes under retainers.

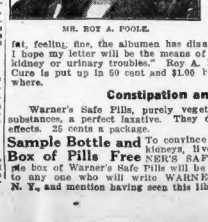
A very striking illustration of what Warner's Safe Cure will do in the case of Mr. Roy A. Poole, of Brookins, S. D., who was scarcely able to move for twelve months owing to kidney trouble, in the form of Bright's Disease. He is now well and active, having been completely cured by

WARNER'S SAFE CURE

For the Kidneys, Liver, Bladder and Blood



MR. ROY A. POOLE.

The following letter expresses his gratitude: "I wish to praise Warner's Safe Cure for Bright's Disease. I hardly know how to start, because I cannot say enough in praise of it—it has been of such great benefit to me. I was first taken sick with rheumatism on Oct. 4, 1908. I was in bed most of the time until April 15th, 1909, when I came home. I could hardly walk with a cane. My doctor found I had Bright's Disease, large amount of albumen, palpitation of the heart, weak stomach, blinding sensations, shortness of breath, pains all through my legs and body. I doctored until the first of June, and was getting worse all the time. I got so that I had to help me in and out of a chair. I was almost gone. My mother advised me to try your remedies, as they cured her brother-in-law 28 years before; so I did. After the second bottle I began to get better. I have taken eight bottles, and I also take one of Warner's Safe Pills at bed time every day. I am getting fat, feeling fine, the albumen has disappeared and every bad feeling gone. I hope my letter will be the means of helping every person suffering from kidney or urinary troubles." Roy A. Poole, Brookins, S. D. Warner's Safe Cure is put up in 50 cent and $1.00 bottles, and sold by druggists everywhere.

BROCKTON GIRL WINS MEDAL AND SCHOLARSHIP

BROCKTON, June 30.—Miss Alice Louise Carney, a graduate of the Brockton High School in 1909, has returned to the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. James F. Carney, No. 48 Ash street, after a year's study at the Mount St. Joseph Seminary, Hamilton Heights, Hartford, Ct., where she received signal honors.

Miss Carney not only completed the usual two years course in one, but also received the scholarship for the highest percentage in her studies, winning the honor in competition with the 125 other pupils. Her percentage was 93.8, which entities her to a four years' tuition scholarship at St. Angela College, New Rochelle, N. Y.

At the commencement exercises Miss Carney was presented with a medal of gold inscribed with her name and the name of the seminary. The award was made by the new bishop, Rt. Rev. J. J. Nilan. Miss Carney has taken up the following studies during the past year: Sociology, philosophy, ethics, chemistry, vocal and instrumental music and elocution.

Miss Carney has not decided whether to go to New Rochelle or not, but it is probable that she will go to Simmons College, where she might prepare to teach domestic science.

MOTHER WITNESSES YOUTH'S DROWNING

BANGOR, Me., June 30.—Proud because he had learned to swim several strokes, Percy Chamberlain, the seventeen-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Chamberlain, urged his mother and sister to go down to the bank of Kenduskeag stream not far from their home to witness his achievement. He waded out to his waist and took a stroke towards shore, but went under. He came up and complained of a pain in his neck. He tried again and sank.

When he did not appear his mother shouted for help, but before assistance came the boy had floated out in deep water and drowned. His neck was found to be badly cramped, which probably caused his death.

GIRL HANGS SELF MAKING SWING

MILFORD, N. H., June 30.—Emily S. Joslyn, aged eleven years, met death by hanging in the loft of the Joslyn barn on North street. Playmates discovered her body.

Dr. Eugene Wason stated the girl had been dead probably fifteen minutes when found. The indications were that she may have tried to make a swing and had stood upon a lounge in the loft, and in swinging off the rope had become entangled around her neck and strangled her. The child's father, Harry Joslyn, is in the West, and the mother is heartbroken over the sad accident.

BANDIT NOW HAS HOPE OF LIVING

The condition of Andy Abson, the wounded bandit now at the Lynn Hospital, shows improvement today, and the surgeons say he will recover unless blood poisoning sets in.

Abson shows some signs of fever, but Dr. Hawes says this is gradually abating. She has passed the stage of suffering from his wounds is shown by the fact that a physician asked him if he ever used a pick and shovel. His reply indicated that he had not, though his words were unintelligible.

FOXCROFT IS REAPPOINTED BY GOV. DRAPER

Frank Foxcroft of Cambridge was renominated as a member of the Massachusetts Civil Service Commission by Governor Draper today in face of the protest of Mayor Fitzgerald and others that there ought to be at least one Boston man on the board.

Under the new city charter, the Civil Service board has to approve of appointments to the heads of Boston city departments, or the nominations by the Mayor are void. Several men now in office have been appointed have been turned down. Notable examples are the late Mayor Hibbard, whom Mayor Fitzgerald named for city collector, and Surveyor of the Port Jeremiah J. McCarthy, named for fire commissioner. Mr. Hibbard was a Republican. So is Surveyor McCarthy.

McCarthy's Petition Tabled.

Mayor Fitzgerald holds that as all municipal department heads must stand or fall by the Civil Service Board's verdict, there should be at least one Boston man on the commission. All its members live out of town.

When the Foxcroft nomination came from the Governor to the Executive Council today, Councillor William F. Murray of Charlestown filed with the body a petition from McCarthy asking for a hearing on his charges against the Civil Service Commission. His petition was laid on the table. Then the Council started for Tewksbury to make the annual inspection of the State institution. The Foxcroft nomination goes over for a week before action can be taken.

Other Nominations.

Other important nominations sent to-day to the Council by Governor Draper were: Margaret F. Russell of Boston, prisoner commissioner; Daniel C. V. Palmer of Medes, Commissioner of weights and measures; Mrs. John T. Prince of Newton, member of the Massachusetts commission for the blind; John A. Bergen and Charles M. Davenport, both of Boston, trustees of the Industrial School for Boys; Matthew T. Mayes of Springfield, member of the Board of Registration in Medicine; Howard V. Brown and Nathan L. Amster, both of Brookline, and Alice L. Higgins of Boston, commission to investigate employment and intelligence offices.

BRILLIANT THRONG SEES GREATEST RACES IN VARSITY HISTORY

GREAT THRONG OUT TO SEE RIVAL CREWS IN THAMES RACES TO-DAY

By A. H. C. MITCHELL.

NEW LONDON, June 30.—Yale won the toss in all three races on the Thames to-day. She chose the east side of the river for the varsity eight and four-oared events and the west side for the freshman eights. The river was as placid as a filled bath tub in the morning, and no more ideal conditions for rowing could possibly be imagined. "Jim" Wray and John Kennedy, the rival coaches, were both in high good humor and each declared he was satisfied with his men.

"The crew that wins that varsity race," said Kennedy, "will surely know they've been rowing a boat."

One cannot get a room at a hotel here for love or money. All the cots in town were in use last night, and where scores of late arrivals slept is more than any one knows.

Trains from the northeast and west began unloading hundreds and hundreds of visitors at an early hour to-day, and the Union depot was so packed and jammed that one could hardly move in it. With the arrival of the crowds, came an army of street fakirs, with flags and souvenirs of every description. Every one carried a flag or a bit of blue or crimson ribbon.

Autos Block the Way.

The main street leading from the depot to the two leading hotels was soon jammed like Washington street in Boston on Ivory soap day. Automobiles by the hundreds whirled through the thoroughfares. Most of these touring parties brought their lunches with them, as it was almost impossible to force a way into any of the restaurants.

From the dawn of the day, clear through the morning, private yachts of all sizes, kinds and descriptions poked their way up the harbor, steamed through the drawbridge and dropped anchor in the positions along the finish line assigned by the harbor master, so that long before noon, two long lines of pleasure craft stretched up the course through which the varsity eights will speed to victory and defeat.

Morgan Yacht There Early.

Black, solemn, yet graceful, among them was J. Pierpont Morgan's big yacht, The Corsair. She was an early arrival and secured a choice position as close to the finish as she could get. The river and harbor were alive with swift motor boats which churned up the water from the training quarters of the crews down the four-mile stretch to New London.

Mr. Abercrombie, who had come over from Boston, was surrounded by a brilliant party, whose colors showed almost equally balanced sympathies for Harvard and Yale. Secretary Meyer was on the Dolphin with all his family and rooted for Harvard every bit as loudly as did that other enthusiastic supporter of the Crimson, Ambassador to France, Robert Bacon.

Scores of others almost as well known as these were recognized and cheered by the undergraduate rooters of both varsities as their eager faces peered over yacht bulwarks or surmounted autos, tally-hos and broughams, the drive from the docks was a veritable assemblage of national celebrities, the great feature lacking to make it a spectacle for all time perhaps being the presence of President Taft at the head of the Blue cohorts and of Theodore Roosevelt in the leadership of the Harvard legion.

River Dotted With Boats.

Despite the dullness in Wall and State Streets and the low price of stocks, there was never such a gathering of yachts and motor boats as is seen this year on the Thames. And under a prominent captain of industry was numbered among the spectators. Of course, those aboard the boats see only a flash of the race itself, but what care they? It is the big out-door event of the year and it costs money to see it so everybody wants to be in line.

It was a beautiful sight. All the pleasure craft were gay with color from truck to waterline. Enormous flags of crimson and blue, as big as the side of a barn, streamed from many of the yachts. And many gay parties were aboard these floating palaces.

Stretched along the side tracks of the railroad lay the observation trains like two mammoth snakes. They were soon filled with humanity, bearing waving banners and flags, for at 10:30 the first race of the day was scheduled to start. But the varsity race those bedding tickets on the Central Vermont train would see the start of the struggle right at their feet, but would have hardly any view at all of the finish, while those on the New York, New Haven & Hartford train would see plenty of the start, but be right on top of the crews at the finish.

Grads Out in Force.

Which was to be the better, the start or the finish of the great race? One was sure of excitement at the start, and there was no guarantee that the finish would be worth the trip.

It was the greatest reunion of old graduates on record. Hundreds of old fellows who had helped win fame and honor for their alma mater in their undergraduate days shook hands for the first time in years and talked over their happy college days. To print the list would simply mean recording the names of pretty nearly every prominent oarsman who rowed for Harvard and Yale in the past forty years.

With the arrival of the first trains today they was a rush for the observation cars which backed up promptly on time and waited for their human freight. There were plenty of empty seats when all the holders of tickets were aboard.

The morning races were not the real thing and besides there were still thousands who had not yet arrived from New York, Boston and other points of the compass. But the trains made a very respectable showing, all things considered.

Harvard Slight Favorite.

But Harvard was a slight favorite over Yale, in both the morning races, but the Crimson followers were none too sure of clinching either of them. On the other hand the Yale men were of the opinion that their freshman crew ought to win if the Eli boys were to do any winning at all.

There was little or no betting on the two minor events. Harvard was willing to bet all it had saved from the ball game on the varsity race. Several days ago $1,000 was easy to get on Yale and $500 bet on the varsity, but the Elis would take only $200 of it. While Yale had confidence in the ability of the Blue varsity to down the Crimson, none of the Gales followers could feel like risking much money on the big race.

All the oarsmen were up bright and early at both camps. No cases of overtraining were reported. All the crews were said to be in as good physical condition as it was possible for their coaches, doctors and trainers to make them.

The Harvard men clamored for their Mutt and Jeff pictures as soon as they had breakfasted on Tom, Dick and Harry oatmeal, but the Yale undergraduate rooters are not allowed to read the newspapers for fear they should see a bit of rowing news that might upset them, and the management has a dozen men out of the BOSTON AMERICAN every day.

Clamor for Mutt Pictures.

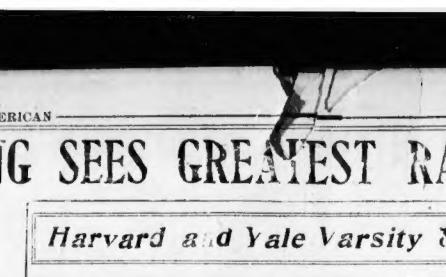
From these Mr. Fisher's celebrated cartoons are promptly cut and distributed among the rowing squads. The boys were so happy that Mutt and Jeff should put an imaginary visit to Red Top, and were very busy cutting out their copy of the Jeffries-Johnson fight listed.

None the less, the appearances of the pair are closely followed, and the cartoons are hence very happy ones. Clippings are handed them every morning.

Great confidence prevailed all along the Harvard line in the ability of the eight-oared crew to win. Coach Wray and Walter B. Peet, the celebrated Columbia coach of fifteen years ago, both saw the Harvard-Cornell race on the Charles last month, and has seen the sidewalks of the Crimson crew in the last few days. He said to-day: "I am convinced that Harvard has a great crew. My eight that could row against Cornell the way they did must be a first-class crew, for I consider the varsity Cornell eight one of the very best Courtney has ever turned out."

The anticipation of a Harvard varsity victory brought the Harvard follow ers here in thousands. Yale could not sell her allotment of reserved seats, but what she turned back were eagerly snapped up by the Harvard crowd. Train tickets were as scarce as hen's teeth to-day.

Speculators had no trouble in disposing of their stock at fancy prices, and after selling out left at once for home. What cared they who won the race.



YALE VARSITY EIGHT

HARVARD AND YALE VIEWS ON BIG RACE ON THAMES TODAY

NEW LONDON, June 30.—Captain Waid of the Crimson eight declined to make any prediction before the races, saying: "We are all in first-rate shape, and I look for a hard race."

Coach Jim Wray said: "I don't care to make any predictions. Harvard has a strong crew to represent her, and I look for one of the hardest fought races ever held on the Thames.

"Over at the Yale training quarters a hard-fought race was predicted by almost everyone. Here are the ante-contest views of Yale men.

Capt. Wodell of the varsity crew: "Everybody knows it will be a hard struggle. We are fit and ready for it, and can we will row our best. That's all I can say."

Julian Curtis, Yale's rowing adviser: "Yale has improved wonderfully, and her crew can all be counted sure to give a good account of themselves."

The Yale crew is shown in the shell; the Harvard eight standing. The Yale crew (in order in the shell) consists of: Bow, E. P. Frost; No. 2, A. P. Colburn; No. 3, F. H. Baker; No. 4, C. H. BRAINTREE MAN WINS A BEAUTY PRIZE ON SHIP

When the Cunard steamship Ivernia docked in Boston harbor today the passengers moved respectfully to one side and allowed H. W. Davenport of Braintree to strike manfully down the gangplank alone. For Mr. Davenport was the most distinguished of all the men passengers, and he blushed modestly at the signal honor bestowed in the disembarkment.

Mr. Davenport had not saved the ship; he had not dived over the side of the vessel and saved human life; nor had he boldly fought flames in the hold. But Mr. Davenport, in a fair and open competition, free for all, age, weight and breed having no bearing had afood on the deck of the Ivernia on Tuesday and been adjudged the most beautiful pan on board.

It was not an easy victory but once won Mr. Davenport was accepted by all in the friendly spirit in which the well mounted pounder puff was his reward.

In the Beauty Show, P. W. Scott of Toronto, took second prize and Samuel Hale of Boston third prize.

The women who acted as judges in the competition were Mrs. Calvin Austin, Mrs. Charles Sumner, Mrs. Waldo Richards and Miss Margaret Austin, all of Boston. They judged the men on general beauty, their health, manners, department and brains having nothing to do with the question.

After all the men were lined up on the decks they were slowly eliminated until but three remained. Then man by man they were dropped down the beauty line until but three remained.

At the last minute Mr. Davenport sprung a knocked knee on his fellow competitors by brushing exquisitely and won out. One of the judges said that she was not influenced by this move, but finally felt that Mr. Davenport was on a well-shaped nose.

On the Ivernia were seventy-seven saloon, 320 second cabin, and 800 steerage passengers. The ship is commanded by Captain Hale of Boston third prize.

PECK ASKED TO RESIGN AS PROFESSOR

NEW YORK, June 30.—A series of letters alleged to have been written by Professor Harry Thurston Peck of Columbia University to a stenographer named Esther Quinn, in which the writer expressed enthusiastic affection for Miss Quinn, was published on June 2, together with the announcement that the stenographer was suing the professor for $50,000 for breach of promise to marry.

The committee on education of the trustees of Columbia College met on the following day and on midnight of June 10 President Butler of Columbia University wrote to Professor Peck that the committee on education had directed him to ask Professor Peck to resign.

On June 8, according to Professor Peck, President Butler called for Europe, and it was not until the next day that his letter in regard to the resignation was forwarded to Professor Peck by the Rev. Edward B. Coe, together with a short note. Immediately upon receipt of this Professor Peck wrote to Dr. Coe asking the committee to give him reasons why he should resign.

According to Professor Peck he received eleven days after a repetition of an expression of opinion based upon facts or charges which were withheld from him. So yesterday the professor wrote to the committee that he respectfully refused to resign.

This march of events was narrated by the professor to-day, and he is now waiting to see what the committee will do. If he is forced out he says he will start a legal battle for reinstatement that will take all of two years to reach a decision.

THIEF GOT PAY OF CONGRESSMAN

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., June 30.—When Congressman Charles F. Booher of the Fourth Missouri District reached home he discovered that he didn't have money enough to buy a ham sandwich, so he borrowed a dime from a stranger.

His month's pay, in bills fresh from the Treasury, had been lifted from his trousers pocket aboard the train. He had intended the new bills as an exhibit this Fall in his campaign against the money power.

RUNAWAY HORSES CAUSE TWO DEATHS

WORCESTER, June 30.—William R. Bell, fifty-two, a retired merchant of this city, and John Ryan, twenty-one, who were injured by being run over and trampled by different runaway horses, died in the City Hospital within half an hour of each other. Very little is known here about Ryan beyond the fact that he boarded at No. 39 Bradford street.

Mr. Bell lived at No. 491 Shrewsbury street.

GRANT PERMIT FOR SOUTHBRIDGE FIGHT

SOUTHBRIDGE, June 30.—The bout between Maurice Lemoyne of Webster and Frank Perron of Pawtucket will be held tonight at the Fairview A. C., as originally scheduled. There was some doubt whether the state officials would permit the bout but the club officials have been assured that there will be no interference. The semi-final will bring together Tommy Riley of Boston and Mike Grady of New York. Dealer will referee.

BEGGARS KEEP "MAKEUP" SHOP

CHICAGO, June 30.—With crutches, wooden legs, plaster casts and materials for producing "wounds," two beggars netted a daily income of $20 each and had porterhouse steak and champagne for dinner.

Charles Trent was known as a deaf and dumb cripple, while Frederick Miller had a wooden leg. After a good day's work they would meet in a drinking saloon, congratulating each other, and were arrested.

In their room were champagnes and porterhouse steak, and they had just finished a bountiful meal. Miller was found to have an ingenious way of concealing a real leg through a wooden one.

In the room were three razors, a set of crutches, four extra wooden legs, many plaster casts to use on broken limbs, and pigments and chemicals for producing "wounds" and sores.

Both beggars were found on examination to be perfect physically and well off financially.

SHOT PET FOX LOST 31 YEARS

INEZ, Ky., June 29.—While guarding his chicken coop from eight prowling marauders, William Stone, a prominent farmer, shot and killed a fox. Upon examination of the body showed the well-worn collar and nickel band, and the name inscribed thereon could be easily distinguished.

Upon the collar was engraved the name of "Pete," who was owned by Mr. Stone's father, and was presented to him by a neighbor when a puppy. Pete was last seen thirty-one years ago.

In 1875 the fox, then only a few months old, was captured and tamed by the family. A collar with a nickel-plated band, upon which was inscribed the fox's name, Pete, was placed around his neck. Three years later it disappeared. An examination of the body showed the well-worn collar and nickel band, and the name inscribed thereon could be easily distinguished.

55 PERSONS DIE IN FLOOD

SALYERSVILLE, Ky., June 30.—Advices received today from the flood stricken section of Eastern Kentucky say that fifty-five persons lost their lives, $250,000 damage was done and that in the lower valleys the waters are still spreading devastation. Searching parties are still looking for other bodies, but it is believed that many of the missing will never be found.

ROOSEVELT APPEAL IN AID OF HUGHES

During the last week great numbers of Republicans and of independent voters from all over the State have written me, urging the passage of the direct primary legislation. I have seen Governor Hughes and have learned your views from your representative. It seems to me that the Cobb bill, with the amendments proposed by you, meets the needs of the situation. I believe the people demand it. I most earnestly hope that it will be enacted into law.—Colonel Roosevelt's message to Lloyd C. Griscom, Chairman of Republican County Committee, New York.

AUTO OWNERS ARRANGE BIG OUTING DAY

By J. C. KERRIGON.

An all-time outing of men and friends of the Bay State Automobile Association has been determined upon for Saturday, July 9, when a field day will be held at the Hotel Sweetwater, Bedford Springs. The committee in charge of the event has arranged a most interesting afternoon and evening program, and it is expected that the members will turn out to this, the first field day of the year. A baseball game will be called at 4 p. m. so that those who believe in the national game may display their proficiency. Tennis will also come in for consideration at the hands of some of the members, while bowling will not be overlooked. At 7 o'clock dinner will be served, followed by music and dancing. The committee has made special arrangements so that those members of the club who desire to remain over night can easily do so, a special rate having been quoted for the organization.

This outing is intended to be what might be termed a family reunion, and it is hoped to make it fully as enjoyable as were those events of two and three years ago. Secretary E. A. Gilmore is calling arrangements for the outing, and those desiring to participate should immediately communicate with him.

THE A. A. A. tour come to a conclusion in Chicago to-day. The cars that have traveled over the difficult course laid out with them immediately go into the hands of the technical committee for examination, and the award will be made known. This year's tour has been the hardest ever experienced, and it might really be called a car-wrecking expedition rather than a tour. The men and cars have been made to undergo hardships that would never fall to the lot of the average car, and that any of them should come back to Chicago in working condition puts a great feather in the cap of American manufacturers.

Of the original starters, it is believed that but seven cars will finish the trip, the others having been withdrawn at different points en route. Of course, there has been more or less dissatisfaction over the tour, there always has been and always will be. This, however, is the first tour in which a contestant has ever seen fit to petition the court for an injunction to prevent the announcing of penalizations of the cause for penalizations. It is a matter of significance perhaps, that the contestor requesting the granting of an injunction was not present at the official [illegible] case was officially dropped.

While the Glidden tour is coming to an end to-day, the "Flanders 20" still continues its drive under three flags. The car is to-day in Oklahoma, on its way to Mexico. This car has done some phenomenal work since it left Canada some three or four weeks ago, and has attracted no end of attention throughout the country.

* * *

Indianapolis is already alive to motor racing interests, and is now preparing for the Cobe trophy race to be held in that city on Monday next. Harry Grant, the only Boston man who will drive a car in the race, is attracting considerable attention in his practice spins, which up to date have been productive of more speed than that made by any of the other men training, but as Grant says, "Practice and actual competition are two different things. If my car is in shape, I shall do the best I know to win on Monday next."

TWO SAILORS DROWN IN PORTLAND HARBOR

PORTLAND, Me., June 30.—Two sailors, William Shields, thirty-one years old, and Hamilton Skinner, aged twenty-two, were drowned in the harbor here.

The men belonged to the crew of the six-masted schooner Edward R. Wheeler, which was anchored in the stream. Both were seated on a staging, painting the hull of the vessel, when Shields fell overboard. He could not swim, and Skinner, who was an excellent swimmer, jumped in after him. When he reached Shields the other man locked his arms about him, and the two sank after a short struggle and did not reappear. It was believed both bodies were swept out to sea.

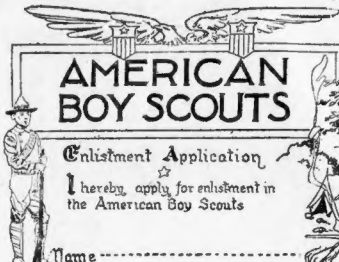
5,000 ENROLMENT IS PREDICTED FOR LOCAL AMERICAN BOY SCOUTS



Fill out the above coupon and mail to George H. Gorden, secretary New England Headquarters, American Boy Scouts, No. 5 Bromfield street, Boston, Massachusetts.

Did you happen to pass by Bromfield street, near the corner of Washington yesterday? "See the boys? Just three hundred of them made a call at the New England Headquarters of the American Boy Scout Movement between the hours of 8 a. m. and noon. Twice as many made application before 5 p. m.

From appearances, one might have supposed that many of them had been up all night waiting for the headquarters to open. Bromfield street is a "one way" street for vehicular traffic, but for the dozens and scores of eager boys who have decided to become a part of the Scout Movement, Bromfield street all day was an open thoroughfare.

Because of the large number of boys who made a personal application for information the secretary and clerks have found it impossible to keep up with the enormous mail inquiry. The boys who have written asking for information will receive a reply at once. A very large number of boys seem to think that the American Boy Scout Movement means just a lark in the country for which some rich man or group of men will furnish the funds. It is nothing of the sort.

Every boy must understand that this is a serious movement for his improvement. It is an organization which is spreading all over the United States. There is every reason to believe that within six months there will be more than a million members. The feature of the Boy Scout Movement is outdoor life. While it is organized along military lines, and the boys will be receiving training which will be of great value, the scout movement will also train boys in the art of peace so they will be better citizens.

New Enrolment System.

Because of the large, unwieldly number of boys who, in their eagerness to become scouts, have called at the New England headquarters, Mr. George H. Gorden, the secretary, has found it necessary to completely change the method of enrolment.

After to-day no individual enrolments will be received except by mail. After to-day enrolments of groups of ten, that is of the patrols, must be sent by mail.

If a Boys' Brigade or a kindred boys' society or organization desires to enroll in the Boy Scout movement, any official from such society with proper credentials is invited to call or write to the New England headquarters and make the necessary arrangements and receive instructions.

After to-day all who desire to join the scout movement must do as follows:

If a boy wants to be just a private in the ranks he must cut out the application blank in this newspaper, fill it out, and, after his father, mother or guardian signs it, mail it (not bring it personally) to the New England headquarters.

Order Not for Parents.

If a boy wants to be a patrol leader and feels that he can get ten boys of good character to join him he must have each of such boys fill out a separate application blank in his own writing and indorsed by his father, mother or guardian. When the leader has obtained nine applications besides his own he must MAIL the applications to the New England Headquarters, American Boy Scouts, No. 5 Bromfield street.

In every case where such a patrol of scouts is formed, the boy who has been elected leader must notify the secretary. He may do this by writing the word "Leader" on the face of the application and placing it first on the pile of applications.

This order to applicants NOT to call in person does not apply to friends of the movement, to the older boys who wish to volunteer as drill and scout masters, parents seeking information, etc.

The officers and former officers of the militia and United States Army and Navy are invited to volunteer for the invaluable work they alone can do in advising and organizing this wonderful movement.

Remember, boys, that after today you must mail your application.

Also remember that you must put a two-cent stamp, not a one cent stamp on the envelope.

Boys are insistently inquiring how soon they may begin to get into camp, get their uniforms and all that sort of thing.

But, boys, before we can move our grand army of Scouts into action against the enemy we have first to get organized, first to enroll. We must know the names, the addresses and get the endorsement of parents and then we shall go ahead to the next step.

Probable Strength 5,000.

Just as soon as the first hundred patrols are formed a call will be issued for a meeting of patrol leaders to be held down-town. At this meeting the leaders will receive full information about uniforms, camping, drill and scout masters, parents seeking information, etc.

Just now the thing to do is to enroll yourself, and if you want to be a leader, get busy and get nine other boys in your patrol. Then read the newspapers every day and the next step will be announced.

Get into line, boys. Be SCOUTS.

The headquarters here will be open three days. In that time, applications by boys who feel that they can organize patrols of ten each, indicate a membership of more than 5,000. Military men and those who have had experience with boys' organizations say this is almost without precedent. It shows the enormous popularity of the movement.

Boys, do you want to get into it? Get your applications in now.

"SCOUTS OF PEACE, NOT WAR, THESE

"Under the attractive name of scouting, boys are taught, by means of a novel form of instruction, self-help and the duties of citizenship," says Secretary Gibson. "Scout Craft includes the following subjects which are taught by interesting games and tests: First, discipline; second, observation; third, woodcraft; fourth, health; fifth, chivalry; sixth, saving life; seventh, patriotism.

"The motto is, 'Each for all and all for each.' The spirit of altruism and unselfishness must control if boys and leaders are to live happily and helpfully together. 'Be prepared' is one Scout motto. The meaning of this is that the boy must prepare himself by thinking out and practising how to act in any accident or emergency so that he is never taken by surprise."—*H. W. Gibson, Y. M. C. A. CANDY GIRLS IN PERIL BY FACTORY FIRE

Thirty employes, about half of them girls, rushed to-day from the six-story brick factory building of the Edgar P. Lewis Candy Company, Nos. 221 and 223 Endicott street, North End, when fire was discovered in the ceilings and walls of the first and second floors. The damage was not more than $200.

Shortly after 11 o'clock a. m., Jack Goldberg of Myrtle street, West End, a shipper, saw smoke eddying from the ceiling and walls of the building. The first floor is the shipping and salesrooms while the offices are on the second floor.

Goldberg ran to the elevator well and shouted the alarm to the office. Miss Grace Mack, a stenographer, and Miss Linda McKenzie, a candy wrapper, heard him and ran out. At the same time Edgar P. Lewis, Jr., saw the fire and called up to the sixth floor that the building was on fire.

Mrs. Cahors, floorwoman, marshaled the dozen girls there and they all hurried to the street. The firemen came and confined the fire to the ceiling and walls. The blaze, which was more smoke than fire, was soon extinguished.

PRIMARY WAR GROWS HOTTER IN NEW YORK

ALBANY, June 30.—Smiling confidence and sneering defiance were displayed on the countenances of Hughes and anti-Hughes legislators to-day. Nearly all night the Governor's leaders had been doing vigorous direct primary missionary work with the Roosevelt utterances on the proposition.

During the same time the enemies of the executive had been rallying their forces, and although they acknowledged that the timbers of their political ship were creaking badly, they declared there was no danger of sinking. Everyone of the 150 Assemblymen met during the day or evening, whether he was already in Albany or not, summoning him to attend to-day's session, evidently felt as there would be "something doing."

The telegrams were sent by Clerk Ray Smith of the Assembly. They had their effect for the absentees came pouring in all through the night. It was open talk that if the Hughes men did not succeed in making the direct primary a caucus measure before a vote was taken on the proposition, they would induce Colonel Roosevelt to administer another whack which will be struck by way of having President Taft delicately but effectively lift his hand over much local patronage might be manipulated in New York and Kings. Some of the wavering machinemen declared that as between the Hughes direct primary scheme and the possibility of a Democratic Governor being elected because of a divided Republican party, they were for the direct primary.

JEFF GIVES AMERICAN READERS OWN STORY OF TRAINING FOR BATTLE

aged the business end of the show in a way that was not ostentatious. As great many knockers as he met with stories hammering Sam, but I paid no attention to them. My answer to those people always was: 'I'll take every bone as I find him. Berger has been square with me. I am not going to judge him by the stories you bring.'

Every day in a while the report was circulated that Berger and I were going to split. We, of course, promptly denied these tales. I want to say, in closing, that Berger will continue to act in his present capacity. He is the right man in the right place.

Tells How He Trained.

After I had started work at Rowardennan, the real business of answering questions began. The first thing a man would say on stepping off the train at Ben Lomond was: "I hope Jeffries can really get into condition." The answer was he had the gumption to watch my daily workout in the gymnasium.

I went to Rowardennan many weeks in advance of the fight. I had made up my mind to train according to my own ideas. I have never altered this plan, although it brought me in for some harsh criticisms. I began my period of conditioning early, easier and much more rapidly than I had hoped for. For this reason I took a good many half holidays, resting when I knew that a short vacation would do more good than the work.

I had with me at the start "Farmer" Burns, Bob Armstrong and my two young nephews. Joe Choynski soon joined the camp. These men worked hard and conscientiously with me, while Berger saw to it that no detail was lacking to make my camp life a comfortable one.

The fact that I was laboring daily did not protect me from adverse criticism. Eastern writers, who had never been within a thousand miles of my training quarters, printed stories to the effect that I was sick and could not possibly train in condition. The effect of these stories was widespread and reached us in hundreds of letters and telegrams being forced into our camp during the last few days.

"Public Knows That I've Come Back."

The Hearst News Service soon began to send their picked men to the camp—men whose word was generally accepted as law by the American public. These writers broke down the barriers of prejudice and suspicion that existed for a time, and the public began to realize at last that I had "come back" in the borrowed expression.

One of the first writers to visit me was H. M. Walker, a man from my home, the sporting editor of the Cleveland Plain Dealer. Walker trailed me from the time I got up at 5 o'clock in the morning until I put out my bed room lamp at night. He went on the road with me, sat next to me at the dining table and kept his keen eyes on me constantly, even walking to the village with me when I went for the mail.

Walker pronounced my condition to be all that it should be but I understood that this decision was scratched on the quarters at the time for the reason that he was known as a strong admirer of Berger and mine and it was feared that he allowed this fact to blind him to any of my shortcomings. Nothing could have been further from the real facts. Walker gave the situation just as he found it, to the public. W. W. Naughton, the San Francisco writing man, known all over the world as a correspondent of the highest standing, endorsed my condition, but the Eastern people slammed for the benefit of a writer who was not a Californian.

Lauds Hearst Writers

Edward Smith, sporting editor of the Chicago American made a stop the length of the continent for the express purpose of passing judgment on my condition. At the end of an hour's inspection Smith had telegraphed to the Eastern people that Jeffries was Jeffries.

C. E. Van Loan followed. "Van," known from ocean to ocean by the boxing public, was the following word to his paper, the New York American: "Jeff is ready to fight a fifteen minute battle."

Jim Corbett and Joined my camp by this time. He added his opinion to that of the men mentioned above. With the public finally satisfied that I was in the condition to give battle to Jack Johnson, I fancied there would be no more doubt and uncertainty of any kind to face—that it was more a question of waiting until the gong should call the negro and myself to the center of the ring.

In this I was badly mistaken. The greatest shock, surprise and disappointment of my career came on the afternoon of June 20th. On this date I was given a real knockout. I was sitting in a big chair in the living room of my cottage when the telegraph operator from Rowardennan walked in and, without a line and carrying a fluttering bit of yellow paper in his hand, said:

"It's all off, Mr. Jeffries," he said. "Governor Gillett has ordered the fight stopped."

Determined to Fight.

"I don't believe it!" I said. I read the telegram from San Francisco and then walked into my room and shut the door. I wanted to be alone a while. I was trying to reconcile myself to the situation. It seemed incredible to me that the Governor should take such an action after the continued encouragement he had given to Richard and Gleason, the men who were spending hundreds of dollars every day in building the big fight arena and perfecting the last thousand and one details in connection with the staging of the fight.

When I had brought myself to a realization of the fact that Governor Gillett thought well of the public. The public wanted to see the fight. I was willing to myself.

I am going to fight Johnson if I have to take him out on some island in the middle of the Pacific ocean. I am not off with him there."

Within the next few minutes I had wired the promoters that I would hold myself in readiness to go to any place in the world that they might select as a suitable site for the battle.

People Want to Fight.

I figured that I would keep right on training so that the unexpected action of Governor Gillett would not in any way affect my condition. My work was to be regulated by my physical condition in the least. The idea that Johnson and myself would not be permitted to fight was the last thing that entered my head.

It is not my intention to critize Governor Gillett's action. A few hundreds of thousands of people, I suppose, would have already attended to this. I suppose Governor Gillett believed this was doing what was right.

I think, though—that the Governor when he said that he was not satisfied with the guarantees we gave him that we would have all reasons for believing that the fight would be pulled off, showed Gillett's move been a popular one it would not have created the widespread comment among the business men and good citizens of San Francisco that it did. The protests that arose at Mr. Gillett's seventh hour action were many and strong and came in volumes.

Second to the demonstration on the part of the people that has greeted me every time I have shown my face on the streets proves to me that they want this fight to take place. The turn from this island to Reno was in the nature of one long and continuous ovation.

Attitude Has No Effect.

I have played this game from the champion's seat for a good many years, but I never saw anything to equal the way the public turned out to the depot to cheer me on my way. It made me feel that I would fight Jack Johnson if I had to take him out on a desert island to do so for a few friends as spectators and a dozen Piute Indians as the only betting.

A great many of my friends and acquaintances began talking about the "altitude" as soon as Nevada was mentioned. This is all nonsense. The altitude of this State has no bad or good, effect on me. I worked out just the same here as I did at Rowardennan, at Berkeley, Colma or in my own satisfaction during the few days that I have been in Reno (5,000 feet).

To-morrow I will write a complete story of the details of my training. You have the one advantage over the "War Correspondents." None of them can scoop me on my story. Look for it on page one of the sporting section of the BOSTON AMERICAN.

CHARLIE WHITE TO BE SECOND REFEREE IN WORLD BATTLE

RENO, Nev., June 30.—Charlie White of New York, has been appointed second referee of the Jeffries-Johnson contest by agreement of the fighters and Promoter Rickard.

Rickard, in case of accident to Rickard, will step into the ring and take charge of the contest.

The appointment of White followed quickly the receipt of a telegram from Tom Flanagan, Johnson's manager, which stated that Francis Nelson of Toronto, Can., Flanagan's choice for second referee, could not serve. Nelson said other engagements prevented him attending.

Flanagan carried the message to Rickard and stated he would accept White who was proposed by Sam Berger, Jeffries's manager. Rickard cast his vote for White and made the announcement that the latter was formally appointed.

GOVERNOR SURE BIG FIGHT IS ON THE LEVEL

By Tad.

RENO, Nev., June 30.—"After having talked with Johnson, Jeffries and Rickard I am to-day fully convinced that the fight here on the fourth will be absolutely on the level and I shall not interfere under any circumstances," said Governor Dickerson to-day.

"I cannot figure when Governor Gillett of California received his information for stopping the fight in his State because he said he would be in Reno. I have been investigating matters concerning this fight since it was announced that it would be held in Nevada and I want to say that I am satisfied that it will be on the square. In fact I can assure the public there will be no faking.

"Any rumors that I have any intentions of interfering have been made out of whole cloth. I only wanted to be assured that this would be an honest contest. And now I am satisfied. Under the law of the State boxing contests are legal."

Johnson Lets Himself Loose.

Johnson let himself out to-day for keeps, and all Reno is talking about the show.

The champion walked out, although over four hundred saw Johnson, the negro Reno is standing around open mouthed listening to how Johnson cut up Al Kaufman and Jim Willis, made the latter look like a pig and knocked George Cotton cold into the arms of "Professor" Burns.

The big colored fellow was on show for fair. Two Rickard brought the Governor out to watch and the champion completely made it a show. He started off with the medicine ball and had every one around him in an extended battle of it, and will depend upon his great defense to make an excellent showing. Jeffries will depend upon his youth and vitality to enable him to make a better showing than Jeff. What he thought of the report that Johnson was inclined to loaf in the ring when he got into the ring, Murphy had a good sign of this in his bouts with his sparring partners.

Must Keep His Eyes on the Job.

One fault of Johnson's was likely to prove fatal to the champion in the contest before he got into the ring with Jeff, Murphy said. This was his habit of looking around in the clinches to see what the spectators thought of his work.

Let him do this once on the Fourth of July, and Murphy and Corbett would be gloom in the negro sections of Reno.

Murphy thinks both men are in danger of getting a bit too fine. He found Johnson has gained 210 pounds, a pretty notch, while Jeff was inclined to be a little fleshy when he got here for the fight, but said he is a whole lot in Johnson that the public knows nothing about.

"That fellow knows more than you think he does," said Murphy, as he left the ring after leaving Johnson to-day. "You know every time I step in the ring with him I am troubled with a voller of punches. He handles himself as easily as a boy does when he gets away with it. Why, when he was sparring with Corbett prior to his fight with Monahan I was surprised at the footwork that Johnson showed. Then I got on my set foot as any man I ever saw and, believe me, if he wants to box away from a man the other fellow's going to have a tough time guarding him."

Second Referee for Emergency.

Announcement made by Tex Rickard that he is going to have Jeff and Johnson select a second referee, so that there will be no chance of anything happening to him, has revived the report that Rickard really intends to officiate and is now trying to let the job slide gracefully.

This, however, denies that he means to act all right, but says there should be a second man ready for any emergency that may arise. He points out that one of the big fighters is likely to lay his head on his wife and sings that in this case he would probably not be in condition to referee anything for many years.

Rickard is now much more cheerful than he was a few days ago, and says he feels certain he will have a fabulous house, as he loses his calculations upon the prices the ringside seats will bring. He removed the mask, since the removal of all doubt about the fight taking place, having confirmed him that the big arena will be filled to the brim.

Captain Coy, head of the State police, says he is going to have all the men on hand to maintain order and protect Johnson, in case the negro wins. Coy's men will wear their guns in their belts in plain view of all. They will be under strict orders to throw out any person who looks, hints or tries to make trouble in any way. Coy laughs at the danger of rioting or serious disorder taking place, and says he and his men are amply able to handle the situation.

Dope handed out by Mike Murphy, the famous trainer, after watching both Jeff and Johnson work for several days, is very interesting. Mike says Jeff is a whole lot faster than he was when he fought Corbett at Coney Island, but is not even faster than Corbett is. He was surprised, he says, at the remarkable footwork shown by Jeffries, when testing Corbett's speed in one of the fast-footed of the time, and never makes a motion until he is forced. He never uses his toes and does no feinting of consequence, but when the time comes for him to let it punch go, he pops it out short and sharp, and the eye is good. Murphy says, his judgment of distance is absolutely the best, and he never interferes with his punches.

Murphy believes Johnson will try to make an extended battle of it, and will depend upon his great defense to make an excellent showing. Jeffries will depend upon his youth and vitality to enable him to make a better showing than Jeff.

What he thought of the report that Johnson was inclined to loaf in the ring when he got into the ring, Murphy had a good sign of this in his bouts with his sparring partners.

Kid McCoy For Guide.

Recurring to the Jeffries auger against Johnson's speed, Charley Goldman, Kid McCoy has ever been my guide, philosopher and friend. Long ago he told me that this auger of temper would be displayed in Jeffries when the surest sign of perfect fighting shape. Mr. McCoy explained, in his peculiar way, he himself was as 'good-natured as a sheep and no more bellicose than in a mixed maid.' But let him reduce to 158, the fighting weight he used to be, and he turned all the world, and would take a careless punch at his own born brother." Goldman says that this is the kind of temper to the final ounce and that sour mood to the finish inclusive. "Biting a tempered nail in two" would as a necessary give Jeffries the kind of temper of which I deduce that the rancor noticeable in the bouts of Jeffries' sparring partners, together with his obstinate determination not to be knocked out by Johnson, has in all things—failing for example—do as Mike Murphy says, Jeffries that he is physically fit and ready to fight.

If there is any one thing that grave over it, that one is Johnson, thwarting his care-free attitude from the Hicks, about the ring.

Fighting, actual fighting, is attended by the peculiar result of the soul which no stress of training ever brings about. Three hours of fighting is train before 158 pounds. After twenty rounds of fighting for a month or two at 158 pounds. Training is one thing, fighting another. Jeffries makes a fine showing, fighting doesn't always keep. I am told by other observers of the fighting art that nothing could be more flattering than the progress of Jeffries' training has makes. They add, however, that it remains to be seen whether or not these promises will be fostered in the ring.

Jeff Has No Love for Johnson.

One of the signs most hopefully in favor of Jeffries is his evident wrath against his coming adversary. He harbors in his heart no love nor aught resembling it for Johnson. The latter after the manner of his vainglorious kind, has foolishly insisted. Likewise, he has slipped Jeffries under the Jack when the time was. These have served to feed and fatten a kind of feud feeling in the Jeffries breast. Those who have Jeffries victorious argue the most unfeasible of all mind conditions, as Mr. Murphy, who is one of them, explains: "The trouble with Jeffries as a fighter has always been that he lacks the bitter drop. There but is a pinch of natural poison in him. The only time he really tried a man was the day he was where he hurt him. Fighting Sharkey, Jeffries would lumber along good naturedly under the Irishman slugging him. Then he'd tear in and break one or two of Sharkey's ribs. His dislike of Johnson and his desire to give him a beating will put the pull Jeffries through a winner than all his training.

There appears to be in his training no end to the Jeffries endurance. The world has read how he ran Corbett, Berger, Armstrong and Armstrong to a pulling and hauling that has left him also among the dusty, sunburned skirl roads and come to the end of the run as fresh as the fox

The Aviator

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE

His planes are poised above the snow that crowns the mountain's crest.
The envious eagle, far below, sits silent by his nest.
He skims along the cloud strewn trail that threads the quiet skies,
Across the billows of the gale his pinions dip and rise,
Till weary of the lanes that lead beneath the sapphire dome,
He checks his motor's reckless speed and sails serenely home.
The foothills rise to meet him now, the zephyr hums and sings
About his needle-slender bow, and blithely buoys his wings.
A clustered village here and there, a ragged, dingy town,
Drifts upward through the crystal air, as down he swoops, and down.
A solemn pine tree marks the way, he circles slowly past;
The helm commands, the wings obey, and here is home at last.
Yet you and I know not the joy of conquering the air.
We only saw a little boy astride a rocking chair.

Dora Gleason Is Last of the June Brides

By ELIZABETH ELLIOTT.

Among the very last of the June weddings will be that to-day of Miss Dora Moore Gleason and Fredrick C. Daniels Marken, which takes place at the picturesque Summer home of the Gleason family at Manchester-by-the-Sea. Miss Gleason is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Gleason of the Westminster, and is exceeding popular in her set. Mr. Marken's mother is Mrs. Meriam Bruce of Beacon street. Miss Beatrice Frey is to be maid of honor and Leonard Lawrence best man. The Rev. Peter Kennedy will officiate.

This is also the wedding day of Miss Theodora Pomeroy and Philip Wooten, both well known in Boston society. The ceremony will take place at 6:30 this evening in St. Stephen's Episcopal Church at Pittsfield. Miss Pomeroy will have her sister, Miss Eleanor Pomeroy, for maid of honor and her bridesmaids are to be Miss Jessie Pomeroy Bishop of Chicago, Miss Carmen E. M. Martines of New York, Miss Eleanor McCarter of Newark, and Miss Harriett McClure of Chicago. Donald M. Weston of California, will be best man. The ushers selected are H. Kendall Wasson of Indianapolis, Charles D. Lafferty of Pittsburg, Harold Vedder of New York, Charles K. Crane of Dalton, and Charles H. Wilson and Brenton C. Pomeroy of Pittsfield. The young couple were entertained at a dinner last evening given in their honor by Mr. and Mrs. Henry W. Bishop.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Moore, who arrived at their Summer home at Pride's Crossing last week, will remain there but a short time, as they are planning to sail for Europe early in July.

Mr. and Mrs. F. Lothrop Ames have taken the Robert M. Cushing place at Newport for the Summer and are due to arrive there from North Easton about July 10.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert H. Hallowell, with their interesting young family, have gone to their Cape Cod villa at Pocasset.

An interesting wedding which took place last evening was that of Miss Elizabeth Grace Burke, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Burke of Class Day, and Nathaniel Frank Pingree Nichols, son of Captain and Mrs. Edwin T. Nichols.

The ceremony took place at 8:30 in the rectory of the Mission Church, and was followed by a reception at the home of the bride's parents. The Rev. Charles Hoff officiated.

Ex-Representative Malcolm E. Nichols was his brother's best man, and Miss Rhoda Gertrude Burke was her sister's maid of honor.

The bride, who is an exceptionally pretty girl of the pure blonde type, was most attractive in her gown of white. She carried a shower bouquet of sweet peas. The maid of honor wore pink satin veiled in white. Upon returning from their honeymoon trip Mr. and Mrs. Nichols will be for the Summer at No. 30 Underhill street, Winthrop.

The Francis M. Whitehouses have arrived at their Manchester place, "Quarrier." They will remain there only a few weeks longer, as they will start shortly for an extended cruise on their yacht. During their absence the house will be occupied by George Armour, Mrs. Whitehouse's brother.

Mrs. E. A. Shepard and Miss Shepard of Cambridge are about arriving in Europe. They will be abroad three months, one month of which will be spent at the University of Grenoble, France.

Mr. and Mrs. Boylston Beal are at their new home on South Main, Manchester, for the Summer. The Edward R. Crows have arrived at their West Manchester home, and the Charles E. Cottings have opened their cottage there for the Summer.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert DeFord, whose wedding took place earlier in the month in Baltimore, have sailed to pass their honeymoon abroad. For part of the time Mr. and Mrs. DeFord will be guests of Mrs. DeForde relatives in the Isle of Wight. Mrs. DeFord before her marriage was Miss Mary Dorothea Hoffman.

Mrs. Francis Vernon Lloyd is being much entertained by her many girlhood friends here, as she has come on for her annual Summer visit from her home in Philadelphia to be the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Lowell, who have closed their Commonwealth avenue home and are at their Chestnut Hill residence, Mrs. Lloyd, who was formerly Mollie Lowell, was one of the most popular girls of her exclusive set in Boston, and since going to Philadelphia has made an enviable position for herself in the most exclusive circles.

Guy Lowell, who is one of the best yachtsmen in Boston, is having a new 30-meter boat built, which he expects to enter in all the leading races of the North Shore this season. The Lowells have taken the Cole cottage at Marblehead in order to be near Mrs. Lowell's parents, Professor and Mrs. Charles Sprague, who have taken "Sky Rock" for the Summer. Mr. Lowell is already a member of the Eastern Yacht Club and is up for membership in the Corinthian Yacht Club.

Colonel Thomas L. Livermore has taken a house at Gloucester-by-the-Sea for the mid-summer and will have with him his daughter, Mrs. Dulkeny Wells, who has come on from her home in Telluride, Col., Mr. and Mrs. Harris Livermore, also resident, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Livermore, whose home is also in Telluride, and the five grandchildren.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Clay Frick, Miss Helen Frick, who last Summer conducted that successful philanthropic, the Child Frick of New York, are at their magnificent Summer home, Eagle Rock, at Prides Crossing. Miss Frick is already busy with new plans for the success of her home for working girls at the Melville estate at Wenham.

The Washington B. Thomasses are at their beautiful Pride's Crossing villa for the Summer. Miss Margaret Thomas was one of the belles at the Beck tea and Hasty Pudding Club spread on Class Day.

Mr. Joseph Lee and family have arrived at the North Shore and will spend the Summer with Mrs. Levi Lester at the Endicott cottage.

"AVIATION WIDOWERS"

"THE golf widows" of Garden City, L. I., are getting revenge on the "aviation widowers." The "golf widows" are the wives of the golf fiends of Garden City. For several years they have been deserted by their husbands every fine day for many hours after the men returned from business. The men grabbed their golf clubs and hurried away to the golf links, where they kept their wives waiting for dinner until 9 and sometimes 10 o'clock. The "golf widows" were disconsolate. Their protests were unavailing, for the husbands argued that the exercise on the golf course preserved their health, and enabled them to endure the strain of the Summer in their office. The "golf widows" avenged themselves by forming tea parties, and thus getting a little fun to eat they would not be furnished by the time their husbands came home to dinner. Now, however, they have turned the tables. They have given up the tea parties, and every afternoon they hasten to the aviation course. They gather in large numbers, eager to see the aeroplane flights, and in their excitement they think neither of their hunger nor that of their husbands. Consequently the husband who has passed his time on the golf course returns home to find the house deserted and dinner waiting the return of the wife. The men can make no protest, and their embarrassment is making them the laughing stock of the women, who have called them the "aviation widowers."

The Lure of Romance

By ADA PATTERSON

A VISITING prince has told us that Europe, old and wise, has settled the marriage question and settled it right. He has said with the arrogant wisdom of twenty-six years, backed by the traditions of an aged land: "Marriage is too much a duty of citizenship to be treated in a romantic fashion. We men of France go along until we feel that it is time for us to settle down, and then we look for a wife that will meet our requirements, as for a house that will suit our tastes and means."

So this young Duc de Montpensier, brother of the Queen of Portugal, cousin of the King of Spain, and grandson of Louis Philippe of France, tossed a clod upon the coffin lid of romantic love with one hand, and erected a statue to the commercialized marriage with the other.

Fortunately we are so young that we are little impressed by the opinions of princelings in this country. The strongest feeling they inspire in us is pity. Pity because they are not at free as are we to think as they like, to live as they like, to marry as they like. The minds of the monarchs and their poor relations in Europe are as much bound as are the feet of Chinese women of high rank. And being as much bound, are as greatly twisted.

Heredity spoke in this poor young man, for, though rich and handsome and the brother of a Queen, he is a poor young man. The young American student making a certain speech to the chill Autumn days of his election is richer than he. Yes, and wiser, too, for ask this young American student what a man should marry for and he will answer with bullet-like directness: "For love, of course."

If he is the one youth in ten thousand and tinged with European ideas of the commercialism of marriage, he should reply: "Well, a fellow ought to consider qualities and a start in life and that sort. We may as well interrupt him, for his fellow students will interrupt him with a rough wind rudeness, thank heavens! They will probably describe him as he is, and the description is not fit for a family newspaper.

It is the truth that the man who marries a girl for any other reason than that he loves her is less than a man. He is a coward. And the girl who marries for any other reason merits contempt.

Romantic love from marriages and you have a revolting state. In every nation where marriage is arranged it sinks to a sodden state among the poor and becomes a screen for affinity-seeking among the rich.

Romance is the blossom time of life. The heart seeks it inevitably as we return from the frigid wilderness of Winter to the first signs of Spring. We crave it, and the arranged marriages has ever supplied it. Everyone has a right to it. Even the signing and proclaiming of Independence, which perhaps the princelet on our shores has never read, contended it when it declared the list of inalienable rights, naming happiness.

In the balance of the commercialized marriage, the wedding bells upon a dowry, and the whims of the parents of the contracting parties' wards this right is surely lost. Its highest value frees the heart and victim of their encumbering wealth. And the defrauded one try to get back the lost right by reprisals from what they call fate. Human nature demands the flavor of romance, and better that it find it within than without the bonds of wedlock.

We revere to the types of our admiration, and if the young man who profoundly admires the lissome brunette type and permits his parents to arrange a match with a rotund blonde, the parents last is not over when they throw fire after their son departing with the blonde. They would better guard him against marauding, lissome brunettes, for will always, inwardly or outwardly, sigh for the type of his admiration. Even the reward which his romantic tastes gratify, is when romance reigns for us that the heavens open to us. If the practical fares that tread upon the oasis of marriage quickly dim that vision, we have at least had the vision. Its memory remains enrancingly with us. The ironwilled financier becomes a poet, blended by that vision, brief but entrancing, and wrote while he was in love that the stars loved the pink sheep in the sky.

So this age of individualism there is no reason, for, marriage but love. A few egotists believe that it is their duty to a waiting world to transmit their gifts and personality to the world. A former President of the United States howled derisingly that duty into all ears. But he didn't awaken a convincing chorus. The planet plodded on and the birth rate did not materially change, for the queer-voiced majority believe that humanity requires, until calling, rather than a general reproduction.

But, granting his brazen-lunged contention, the children of parents whose marriage had a basis of romantic love, are superior to the offspring of the marriage of convenience. They at least have had a fair start in life. Romance is nature's bait to posterity. The uncomantic lands are poorly peopled. Let us keep to our marriage for love in this country, which two or three centuries has made the wholesomest nation in the world. The Princes were so young and take the youthful view. Be it so, and a kind heaven protect us from the senile-minded marriage practised in the land whence the Prince came.

The Wail of the Crusty Old Bachelor

By KENNETT HARRIS

"WHY is it," asked an unmarried man, who is getting stout and bald and has quit celebrating his birthdays, "why is it that the old bachelor is a pariah and an outcast in society, an Ishmaelite against whom every man's and woman's hand is raised?

"Everybody hates him. Everybody has it in for him. Everybody regards him as a mean selfish, cantankerous curmudgeon, who should be turned from his evil ways by brute force and coercion, if he won't turn any other way. He is the one forlorn figure outside the pale of general human sympathy, to whom even the privileges of the Constitution, that guarantees to every man the right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness in his own way, are denied.

"Women hate the old bachelor because every one of us represents a huntress balked of her prey. Every time a lady looks at an old bachelor dressed in decent apparel, and living in moderate comfort, she is filled with wrath because the money he spends on himself isn't going into chiffons and pattern hats, and ice cream sodas for some woman.

Every married man hates an old bachelor because the bachelor's freedom is a perpetual reminder to him, of his own bondage. The bachelor can come and go as he pleases, without having to give an account of himself. He can stay down town to dine or sup with a chum without having to fix up any lies that he can put across over the telephone.

The old bachelor can come home, any hour of the night, without being due to receive a curtain lecture. The old bachelor has a hair brush that he can use without having a long strand of female hair get down his back.

The old bachelor can spend his money on himself without having to give up every cent, as soon as it is earned, to milliners, and dressmakers, and butchers, and bakers.

Above all, there is nobody that's got a right to remind the old bachelor of his faults and point out to him just what a poor, weak creature he is.

"All of this makes the married man sore. He comes to regard the bachelor as belonging to a privileged class, toward which he entertains an anarchistic feeling that makes him want to pass laws taxing single blessedness as a luxury.

"Now I maintain that this popular attitude toward the old bachelor is most unjust, unreasonable, and uncalled for. In reality, the old bachelor is the most unfortunate of mortals. He is always full, so far from leading a life of unalloyed bliss and carefreeness, his is a life of great and grievous troubles, and trials, that there are positively times when the most case-hardened celibate really is tempted to fly to matrimony as to a temple of refuge.

"Consider, in the first place, this very question of marriage. A man is a bachelor and well off, one able to supply a wife with an automobile and the other necessities of life, he is like the haunted fawn. He never knows a single minute's peace or safety.

"Not only are the usual head hunters of the Spinster and Widow tribes always after him, but even the married women of his acquaintance deems it her sacred duty to provide him with a wife, although she knows perfectly well that he doesn't want one.

And She Never Forgives You

"You have no idea of the wear and tear it is on a man's nerves not to be able to dress himself for a dinner, or pack his bag for a week's end in the country, without saying to himself, as the cold perspiration of apprehension breaks out on his marble brow, 'God help me; will I escape this time? I am going forth into I know not what danger. Will I stumble into the pitfalls that have been laid for me and escape the snares that have been spread for my feet? Will I return to them familiar rooms as a free man, or will I come back with the halter of an engagement ring on my neck?'

"And if you don't go and marry the sweet girl, or the dear Lucille that your match-making friends have picked out for you, and who, she is perfectly certain, suits you, or thinks that you suit her pocketbook, would perfectly suit Marie or Lucille—why, she never forgives you. That's all. She feels that you've put an affront upon her, and, anyway, there is no use in worrying with you any more; and she drops you with a dull, cold thud, with a few strictures upon old bachelors in general that are chastening to the soul.

"Then there are various other shrews to the old bachelor's pillow. Take the matter of standing godfather, for instance. And having a male named after you in the obvious hope that you will remember them in your will, and do something for them when they start to college. By George, if I could assemble together all my godchildren and namesakes I'd have a regiment of infantry. You haven't any idea how bachelors are mulcted in this way. It's positively known fellows who were reduced to bankruptcy by the number of silver christening mugs they had to buy.

"And then the old bachelor is the prey of the borrowers and the hard-luck story. He is a fatally easy mark, receptive to God's got any consideration for him. If a man is married, people recognize that he has a right to the personal use of whatever money he makes, but an old bachelor is looked upon as an eleemosynary institution, who works for the public good.

"Snickling says, Jonesby, old boy, I can't wait for Perkins for anything because he is married, but you've got nobody but yourself, and so I know you will do me a favor and a few thousand, etc., etc., etc.' Your Aunt Maria writes, 'My dear John, since you have no wife and family to provide for, I have no hesitation in asking, etc., etc., etc.'

You're Expected to Hand Out

"And so it goes. Because you have had sense enough to duck a wife and twins you are expected to hand out to everybody who comes along. Furthermore, nobody has any respect for your privacy. People who wouldn't think of invading a married man's house drop into your bachelor quarters as if they owned them, until you come to believe that the perfection of a wife is really almost worth the trouble it would cost you.

"Oh, I tell you, the lot of the old bachelor is not a happy one, and instead of being held up for scorn as a sybarite, a gilded monster, and an undesirable citizen generally, he is entitled to the sympathy of the married who hears undeserved suffering with silent humility."

Ella Wheeler Wilcox says

"It falls to the lot of every young woman, or widow (quite) to find herself the recipient of ardent glances from eyes which ought to look elsewhere, and to hear tender cadences in a voice which becomes dull or discordant when it makes utterances in the domestic circle."—See next Sunday's

TODAY'S STOCK MARKETS; FINANCIAL NEWS

STOCKS TOUCH NEW LOW MARK

NEW YORK, June 30.—Nearly every gilt-edged investment railroad and industrial stock touched a new low record on the New York Stock Exchange to-day as the result of another outburst of liquidation.

Declines of from one to three points were recorded in the first fifteen minutes of trading. Liquidation was heaviest in Southern Pacific, Union Pacific and Hill shares, Brooklyn Rapid Transit, Atchison and St. Paul. Stocks on these railroads controlled by Edward Harriman also were weak and touched new low records. Missouri, Kansas & Texas fell to the low prices of 21¾, and Chesapeake & Ohio at 72½.

Leading banking interests came to the support of the list with large buying orders just at a time when it looked as if the market would become demoralized entirely. These buying orders caused a rally of about a point on the low prices.

Amalgamated Copper was one of the stocks that did not sell at low record prices. In London American shares on the New York curb were sold freely.

MRS. LONGWORTH TO TAKE BALLOON RIDE

PITTSFIELD, Mass., June 30.—Clifford B. Harmon, the aviator, is preparing to make a balloon flight from here next week.

Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt, Jr., Miss Cornelia Bryce and Miss Mabel Hawley are to be passengers.

Mr. Harmon will use his own big racing balloon and the ascent will probably be made at night for the purpose of getting a view from a balloon and the possibility of a long flight. The party will come up from New York shortly to a Lenox resort hotel, and will get away from the Pittsfield Aero Park before daylight.

Mrs. Longworth has been eager to make a flight for some time, and Mr. Harmon made a promise since he would pilot the other passengers at Hempstead, where they have been constant admirers of his daring aeroplane flights.

80 AND 82 SUMMER ST., BOSTON, JUNE 30, 1910

The Japanese Menace and the American Duty

The interview with Mr. Hearst from El Imparcial, of the City of Mexico, printed upon this page yesterday, is a reaffirmation of things that Mr. Hearst and his newspapers have said before, and will say again, and which cannot be too often or too strongly said, until they have borne their legitimate and desirable fruit in the awakening of this country to its danger and its duty.

These are essentially American newspapers—for the American people—jealous of the commercial prosperity of this country, of its moral and intellectual development, of the beneficence of its government, of the health and happiness of its people, and at this time and at all times profoundly concerned for the wise and ample "preparedness" of this country among the dangers and emergencies presented by the armed camps and the embattled squadrons which make up the nations of the older world.

It is far above and beyond the spirit of the alarmist that attention is called to the especial menace to this country in the never ending preparations of Japan for another colossal war. It is simply the fit and most vigorous Americanism to inform the people of the fact.

Of all the nations in the world Japan has the most evident motive and the most effective equipment to fight the United States.

Whether Japan wishes to fight the United States cannot, of course, be positively affirmed. The fact that Japan says "No" proves nothing to those who know Japan and have read its history.

Japan can never give to any other nation assurances more friendly and pacific than she gave to Russia just before her cannon let loose their thunders on the Manchurian frontier.

The fact that is evident and interesting is that Japan continues to make the most prodigious preparations for war, and that our American "unpreparedness" is as tempting to the Mikado's armies as our island possessions and our commercial prestige are enticing to their avarice.

No other nation could fight us so effectively just now or have such practical motives to fight us as Japan.

In view of this startling fact, it is simple apathy or mandlin stupidity to look unmoved upon Japan's war preparations, or to fail to meet them with the strengthening of our fleet and our own defences.

In the brief Mexican interview Mr. Hearst calls attention to the strategic and commercial reasons which impel Japan to look with greedy eyes upon the Philippines and Hawaii, and upon the present inadequate defences on land and on sea, which would make it easy for Japan to humiliate America by the capture of these islands. These things are made so clear that no ordinary understanding can fail to appreciate them.

But the recent trend of international events has uncovered to Mr. Hearst and others a great world reason why Japan should wish to antagonize this country, and why other nations would rejoice to see her do so.

China is yet the spoil of the greater nations. With its vast population and its colossal territory, it is the bone of commercial wrangle. Russia, "the enemy of all nations," holds the northern half of Manchuria; Japan holds the the southern half. Perfidious England, which has never been anything less than a hypocrite in its attitude toward America, holds vast interests and advantages in China.

Russia and Japan are believed to have joined hands for the domination of China, and England is secretly afraid of the compact. All of them are against giving America a fair chance in the trade of China, to which this nation is so eminently entitled.

If Russia and England can inspire Japan to break the commercial prestige of the United States in the Pacific Ocean and to humiliate this country, there are abundant reasons, both commercial and political, why they will be sure to do it.

And Japan is too astute not to know that if she is ever to attempt this traitor part for England and Russia and for herself, she must do it now while America is so shamefully unprepared!

The chancelleries of Europe and America and the thinkers of all countries believe that war between Japan and the United States is not only possible but probable.

Two Russian admirals have recently written this as a carefully argued political prophecy.

London reads eagerly a dozen pamphlets a year from English and German experts which describe the irrepressible conflict for the mastery of the Pacific.

Admiral Fournier, of the French Mediterranean squadron, writes of the war as a certainty of the future.

American statesmen traveling abroad are amazed at the universality of the European sentiment that forecasts the strife.

Most amazing was the recent declaration of Jacob Schiff, almost pre-eminent among American financiers. Jacob Schiff is the head of the great house of Kuhn, Loeb & Co. He is the friend of Japan, and has been its champion and defender. He financed Japan's last great war loan, and knows that people, personally and financially, as no other American does. And Jacob Schiff said at a public banquet in New York:

"I am sorry to say that I believe a mighty conflict is coming."

Our Department of State at Washington could unfold a tale of Japanese arrogance and aggression in dealing with our country over the recent exclusion of Japanese children from California schools which is as humiliating to American pride as it is significant of what Japan thinks it can do, and some day expects to try to do.

The last President of the United States believed strongly in the possibility of a war with Japan, and for that reason gave all his energy to the advocacy of a greater navy for both our ocean shores.

The present President of the United States believes in the possibility of a war with Japan, and is as well the vigorous advocate of a navy ample for protection and defence.

The gallant admiral of our navy sees the menace and the probability, and pleads with his countrymen behind his splendid prestige to "prepare" for what the future may bring.

The American has tried faithfully to do its American duty in arousing Congress to a realization of the necessity of making this country ready for the possible, which is also probable and menacing.

If this country is ever rushed unwillingly and unprepared into a war with Japan, or any other nation, there will be no palliation for either the blindness or the apathy of statesmen who, having eyes, see not, and, having ears, hear not, and, having the presumption of ignorance, fail to understand.

WINIFRED BLACK WRITES OF TWO TEACHERS WHO WERE TAUGHT

By Winifred Black

WINIFRED BLACK

TWO charming young ladies I know went down into Mulberry Bend, New York city, to teach the housekeepers in the tenements there how to be artistic, though broke.

They furnished up a couple of little rooms in the most approved art for art's sake fashion.

They tinted the walls—and the floors—hung copies of the great pictures on the walls, threw a cheap imitation rug or two on the floor, brought in some arts and crafts furniture, and started in to wait for the revolution.

They've been there two months, so they wrote me the other day, and the revolution hasn't begun yet.

The Italian woman across the hall keeps her best room carpeted in ingrain, with nice, large, very bright red roses, and she likes the colored holy pictures on her wall and won't hear of taking them down.

The other day, when the girls invited her into their rooms, she told them all about the originals of the pictures which they had on their walls. She seemed to feel sorry for them, because they had never had a chance to see the real pictures and had to put up with photographs.

She knew all about the Winged Victory which stood on the arts and crafts table. Said she had seen the original a hundred times when she was a little girl. Really, she seemed to know more about real art than even the girls who were trying to teach her something. They were a good deal surprised, of course, because after all she was nothing but a "Dago," and wore a shawl on her head and blessed herself when it lightninged.

The German family on the floor above surprised these young ladies a good deal, too. There are two boys and a girl in the family, and when my two charming young ladies went up to call on the German family, they were surprised to see a piano in the dingy little front room.

One of the young ladies thought she would give the German family a treat, so she sat down at the piano and played "After Your Mother, Who Do You Love?" and "Babe, There's Nothing Like You."

The German family was very polite about the piano playing and after a while the eldest boy got out his violin and the eldest girl got out her 'cello and the youngest girl sat down at the piano and they all played. Queer music—Bach, and Beethoven, and Mozart, and Schubert, and one or two Lieders of Schumann. And they were nobody but German, and ate sauerkraut and pickled pigs' feet and went to picnics on Sunday.

And my two charming young ladies are awfully puzzled. The poor seem to be so different from what they expected.

I wonder, now, what it was that they really expected.

Less Ham and More Eggs

By MILO HASTINGS

IN the United States in 1880 there were forty-seine million hogs and fifty million humans. Twenty years later there were seventy-six million humans, but only sixty-seven million hogs.

In the same lapse of a score of years the production of eggs rose from nine dozen to seventeen dozen per caplta. The market receipts of our leading cities show that this increase of eggs and decrease of hogs still continues.

As the hen has outgrown the hog, so the dairy cow has cast into the shadow her big brother, the beef steer. In fact, we are becoming a nation of milk and egg eaters.

This passage of the cattle range, the wheat field and the hog lot, and the phenomenal growth of the dairy and orchard and poultry yard and garden is the most noteworthy development of modern agriculture.

In the pioneer days of unfenced agriculture, when the boundless prairie was yielding forth the stores of fertility that had been accumulating since the world began, humanity could afford to slaughter animals for food. But the day of limitless land is fast passing in the United States and in the world at large, and the more wasteful forms of production must give place to the more economical.

A hen can lay five times her own weight of eggs in a year. The prize cow at the University of Missouri produced sufficient milk in one year to equal the food value in the carcasses of four three-year-old steers.

There are other forces, however, than that of the growing scarcity of land that are aiding in bringing about an increase in the use of the animal products in the place of animal carcasses.

The preservation and transportation of flesh is an ancient art, but before the days of the private car line the only method of taking eggs to market was for the farmer's wife to haul the basket in her lap. Now the famous yellow special, clattering over the oil tank express, thunders along through the darkness of the prairie with its 5,000,000 eggs, each resting securely in its chilly little pasteboard stateroom.

The flesh of the hog is the natural food of the woodsman, the pioneer, the prospector or the farmer, whose work begins with Aurora's harbinger and ends with the smoky lantern; but there is something about fat pork that fails to appeal to the man who labors with check book and fountain pen.

Perhaps another cause for the tendency to use more animal products and less animal carcasses is the discovery that the full dinner pail of the meat-eating American is the result, not the cause, of his efficiency as a worker, and that, to a certain extent, his efficiency increases as the full dinner pail is lightened.

Much of the credit of this discovery belongs to Horace Fletcher, who, being troubled with a pain in his stomach, began to chew his food.

"It is the much chewing," said Fletcher, but the professors were in doubt, so they measured and analyzed Mr. Fletcher's bill of fare, and discovered that the amateur strong man was consuming but one-third the peefid, or flesh food, element that the professors had said was necessary for physical well-being.

Further experiments show that increased chewing invariably came to those who chewed more and ate less, especially less meat. Today the endurance records standi Knee-bending feat, best vegetarian, 3,400 times; best meat eater, 1,227 times. Holding out arms, best meat eater, 23 minutes; best vegetarian, 178 minutes.

Now, the vegetarians are vegetarians in some only—the vegetarian partakes freely of the product of the cow and the fruit of the hen. There seems to be a reason why meat produces more fatigue than milk or eggs or vegetables. Science cannot explain just why, but the answer lies deep in the mystery of the protoplasmic molecule close to the secrets of life itself.

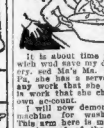
He Writes About Pa's Dish Washer

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

MY third hvenshun is a ottomatick dish washer, sed Pa to Ma & Ma's Ma and Me. Ma's Ma calm to spend most ov the time, & Pa was trying so hard as he cud to be nice to her, it went very easy for anybody to be nice to Ma's Ma, she sed last nite that all men was sinful & full of ways that was vain.



It is about time you invented sumthing wich wud save my daughter all this drudg, ery, sed Pa to Ma. She dosent drudge, sed Ma, she has a servant the year round, & any work that she does around the house is work that she chooses for to do of her own accord.

I will now demonstrate this ottomatick washing & drying dishes, sed Pa. This arm here is marked A, & the clutch at the end of the arm, wich talks the plate of a human hand, is to hold the dishes in. It is marked B. Now, we will dishes in. (I is marked B. Now, we will put this cur chaw bowl in it, clamp it down, & start A in motion over this tub of hot water. The A, makes a graceful downward sweep & dips the bowl in the hot water as it moves around in a circle. This happens several times, until the speed of the arm increases so much that the dish flies around in a high circle & doesn't hit the water any more, owing to cen-trifugol force. Then, sed Pa, begins the drying process. The bowl is now whizzing around in a ring so fast that the motion of the air against it makes it dry. What is the powerj sed Ma. Man power, sed Pa, all you have to do is stand here & turn this crank, & put in the dishes and talk thees out. Nothing cud be simpler.

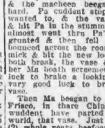
Just then the part of the machien wich was marked B got kind of loose & the cut glass bowl flew out of the window & we herd it hit way down on the pavement in the court yard. It broke. It cost 20 dollars. Of all the fool things I ever saw, sed Ma's Ma, this thing is the worst. I had a dream wen I was first married that my only dauchter was going to marry a man without brains. There is more in dreems than peeple thinks.

Pa got kind of red in the face. That was only a mistake, he sed, that cud happen to any hiresshun, the jaw of it got a little loose, that's all. By jaw isent the only jaw that is loose eround here, eether, sed Pa.

I cud calm ostenz. We will now talk this vase wich is kind of dirty from deekaying flowers stems & I will give it a thoro clean-ing, sed Pa. So he put the vase in the jaw & cranked it & the macheen beegan to whirl awful fast. Pa cudent stop it as quick as he wanted to, & the vase flew out of it & hit Pa in the stumack so hard that it almost went thru Pa's wite vest. Pa grunted & then fell down, & the vase bounced across the room off of Pa's stomick & hit the new looking glass & they both broak, the vase & the glass. Ma & her Ma both screemed, because it is bad luck to brake a looking glass & it isent very good luck to brake a sixty dollar vase.

Then Ma beegan to cry. It calm from Frisco, in thare Chinytown, sed Ma, I wudent have parted with it for the wurld, that vase. Just think, I had it two yeers before I married you. It was gaily to me by a boy that I thought the world of. I cried enuff over it.

Then I am glad it is broak, sed Pa.



You are a brute to say that, sed Ma's Ma. You keep your out of this, sed Pa. I am running this house. I will buy my wife a better vase & I will buy new looking glass, but I dont care any of pure dubbel chin, so keep out of it. At first Ma sed she was going to, but Ma's Ma put her arm around her & Pa made hay agreen for an hour & a half.
